TRUNK SLAYER ADMITS IT; SAYS SELF-DEFENSE

Had Been Shot in Left Hand.

BULLETIN.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 23.—(Special.)—After her examination at police hospital, Mrs. Judd was removed to the office of Detective Chief Taylor for questioning. No details of the story she told the officers were given out. County Attorney Lloyd Andrews of Phoenix took part in the questioning.

Meanwhile, Milan Medigovich, an attorney from Russill & Cantillon's office, announced that Superior Judge Charles Burnell had signed a writ of habeas corpus for the woman, returnable Nov. 3. He announced that her extradition to Arizona will be resisted.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Mrs. Winnie Ruth Judd surrendered to Los Angeles police tonight. She will plead self-defense in the murder of her two Phoenix, Ariz., chums, Mrs. Agnes Leroi and Miss Hedvig Samuelson, whose bodies she transported here in two trunks and a suitcase.

Mrs. Judd surrendered at 6:10 p. m. She was in the undertaking establishment of Alvarez & Moore, not more than 400 yards from the Los Angeles courthouse.

She was on the point of collapse and had been shot through the left hand. She was at once placed under care of two Los Angeles policewomen.

A Three Cornered Fight.

"Mrs. Judd's defense to charges of murder," said Mr. Russill, "will be self-defense. Her story, as told to me, is this:

"'I had gone to the girls' home to remonstrate with Miss Samuelson for some nasty things she had said about Mrs. Leroi. Miss Samuelson got hold of a gun and shot me in the left hand. I struggled with her and the gun fell. Mrs. Leroi grabbed an ironing board and started to strike me over the head with it.

"'In the struggle I got hold of the gun and Sammie got shot. Mrs. Leroi was still coming at me with the ironing board and I had to shoot her.

"'Then I ran from the place——'"

Russill says that is as far as the woman could get with her story, due to her hysterical condition. She will be questioned further as soon as she is calmer.

Attire Is Shabby.

When taken by police, Mrs. Judd was attired in a green dress, a shabby coat of dark material with well worn fur at the collar, no stockings, and black shoes. She wore bandages on both hands. She seemed wan and weary and in danger of collapsing any moment. From the funeral parlors she was bundled into a police automobile and rushed to Georgia street receiving hospital for medical treatment and mental observation.

Her attorneys said Mrs. Judd had been in a sanitarium near Los Angeles since last Monday afternoon, when she called at the Southern Pacific railroad station freight rooms and found that the shootings were on the point of being discovered.

Tells of Hiding in Vacant House.

Another report was that of her husband, Dr. Judd, who said:

"My wife told me she walked through the city after she left her brother early Monday afternoon until she came to a vacant house outside of the city, but not in Beverly Glen, where her brother's cabin is located. [Police suspected young McKinnell of taking his sister to his cabin and directing her disappearance from there.] She told me she stayed in the unoccupied house since Monday and had nothing to eat until she ventured out this morning, when she got some breakfast at a drug store. Then she said she saw a newspaper with my appeal in it and the instructions by which she could communicate with me or the attorneys. At 3 p. m. she made a call to Mr. Russill, who told her where to go."

About Her Surrender.

Mrs. Judd's surrender was not wholly peaceable. Police officers, hastening into a bedroom where she was hidden, were opposed by her brother, Burton J. McKinnell, college student here, and her husband. A short scuffle ensued.

The husband and brother objected to reading of the murder warrant. They were thrust aside. David Mal-

Capone Hears Penalty Today; End Legal Plea

All the legal arguments are out of the way and Al Capone will be sentenced to the penitentiary this morning unless the unexpected happens and his motion in arrest of judgment is granted.

Arguments on this motion were concluded by Capone's attorneys yesterday—and the case was continued for the third time since a jury convicted the gang chief of income tax evasion last Saturday night.

"This case will be disposed of at 10 o'clock tomorrow," said Judge James H. Wilkerson after the lawyers had finished.

Capone may go to the penitentiary in a few days, allowing for the customary stay of execution to permit the arranging of personal affairs if Judge Wilkerson denies him a supersedeas bond. The prosecutors are hopeful that the appeal bond will be denied, but such action is discretionary with the court.

Fight Three Felony Counts.

Defense Attorneys Albert Fink and Michael Ahern indicated that Capone is ready to go to jail on two misdemeanor counts, but that he wishes to fight his conviction on three felony counts, which entail penitentiary service. Such a request, it was intimated, would be made by the defense if a supersedeas bond is denied pending an appeal.

However, the prosecutors characterized this as a mere hope on the part of the defense, and pointed out that such a division of judgment would call for consecutive instead of concurrent sentences on penitentiary and jail offenses. In all other income tax cases here, the jail terms have been made to run concurrently with the penitentiary sentences. A defendant could not get credit for penitentiary service while being in a county jail, where hard labor is not required.

The maximum punishment possible for Capone under his conviction on five counts, three of which are for felony, is fifteen years in the penitentiary, two years in jail, and fines totaling $50,000.

Defense Argument Outlined.

The defense lawyers in their arguments challenged the sufficiency of the three felony counts in the indictment on which Capone was convicted in arguing their motion in arrest of judgment. Attorney Fink contended that the counts, which merely charge willful attempts to evade and defeat income taxes for 1925, 1926 and 1927, should have alleged particular acts, so that the defendant could have prepared his defense.

Prosecutor Jacob I. Grossman argued that Capone's lawyers were harking back to the common law, which required a statement of the means by which an attempt to commit a crime was made.

The court will pronounce judgment this morning after ruling on the motion in arrest of judgment. There will be no motion for a new trial.

NUDE PAINTING IN WINDOW DRAWS IRE OF ANTI-VICE SOCIETY

New York, Oct. 23.—[Special.]—The proprietors of the E. & A. Silberman galleries today drew the ire of John H. Sumner, secretary of the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, when they displayed in their window a sixteenth century painting by Tintoretto of "A Lady Named Susanna" in "September Morn" garb.

Sumner demanded that the Silbermans remove the work from public gaze. The Silbermans refused and the anti-vice crusader stalked out of the galleries. Albeit much frustrated, he said he did not intend to prosecute the galleries.

Lindys Home from Tour by Sea and Air

Newark, N. J., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh arrived here at 9:22 o'clock tonight on their way to the Morrow home in Englewood. They were returning from the aerial cruise in the orient which was interrupted by the death of United States Senator Dwight W. Morrow, Mrs. Lindbergh's father.

Chauffeurs from the Morrow home brought two cars to the airport to meet them. Just as they left here a tire went flat on the large sedan in which the colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh were riding, and they changed to the smaller car, already crowded with their six pieces of luggage.

Denies Interview.

Scores of newspaper men met the couple, but withheld inquiries in deference to Col. Lindbergh's request: "Under the conditions I'd appreciate it if you fellows would not ask questions."

The colonel brought the plane here from Cleveland in three hours and two minutes. The craft, lent him by the Detroit Aircraft corporation for the flight across the continent from Victoria, B. C., where he landed from the liner President Jefferson, was not equipped with landing lights, but a National Guard plane led the colonel to the field.

Will Get Back Old Plane.

The colonel's plane, a Lockheed-Sirius, in which he and Mrs. Lindbergh took off on July 20 from North Haven, Me., near the Morrow home, was damaged when it was overturned by the current in the Yangtze river. Col. Lindbergh said it was being shipped back to him.

Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh received the news of Senator Morrow's death in Shanghai on Oct. 6 and four days later boarded the President Jefferson at Yokohama for the long trip back. They landed at Victoria on Thursday morning.

Col. Lindbergh said he had not decided if he and his wife would return soon to continue their oriental tour.

Burglars Loot Home of State Treasurer Barrett

Burglars entered the home of State Treasurer Edward J. Barrett at 2538 West 66th street yesterday between 2 and 5:30 p. m., while members of the family were absent and escaped with jewelry valued at $3,100. The articles listed by Treasurer Barrett as missing are a diamond ring valued at $2,500, two watches valued at $125 and $75, a diamond lavalliere worth $350 and an automatic pistol. The losses were discovered when the Barretts returned home.

Schwab Sees Prosperity, as Does Farrell

New York, Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Hopes of an early reversal of the persistent deflation of the last three years have been once more revived and "here and there are industries which already have experienced the quickening impulses of consumer demands," according to James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel corporation. He spoke tonight before 1,000 guests of the American Iron and Steel Institute at a dinner at the Hotel Commodore.

Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the board of Bethlehem Steel corporation, who presided at the dinner, agreed with Mr. Farrell that industry is even now making its way back to prosperity.

He urged his hearers to be optimistic and to face the future with confidence in order to help the world to recover from the "greatest depression" it ever has seen.

Confidence Restored.

"The hopes entertained at our last meeting of an early reversal of the persistent deflation of the last three years are once more revived," Mr. Farrell said, "by the action taken in banking circles to restore public confidence in the ability of the nation to find within itself recuperative powers toward trade recovery.

"Here and there are industries which already have experienced the quickening impulses of consumer demands. There has been a slowing down of the declining trend of our export trade, and a reversal, last month, of the unfavorable balance of trade of August.

"These favorable indications, while not as pronounced as we would wish, tend to strengthen the conviction that the resources of the nation are being mobilized in an effort to shake off the despondency which has hampered enterprise, and the lack of confidence which has curtailed consumers' demands.

Warns of Social Reformers.

"Suffering as we are, both from underproduction and underconsumption, it is of prime importance to strengthen the confidence of our people in the future of the country and in a return to reasonable prosperity."

Criticizing the "ill-informed theorists," some of whom, he said, have helped to undermine public confidence, Mr. Farrell declared that American industry was not primarily to blame for the economic depression but "plays a minor rôle as a contributory cause."

He warned against the "emotional social reformers, who with more zeal than knowledge," propose schemes which if adopted "would restrict the freedom of industrial management and sterilize initiative and enterprise."

"The chief danger to be apprehended from these emotional outbreaks," he continued, "is the opening of the door to that policy of 'gradualism' which would lead us by easy stages from our present safe anchorage to that of communism."

But One Course to Pursue.

Scoring the dole system, Mr. Farrell declared that "it would be little short of insanity to yield to the seductive appeals of social reformers who, even from within American industry itself, would set this nation on a path from which sane industrialists in England are seeking to flee."

Pointing out that "the brains, the energy, and the capacity which have brought us thus far are not exhausted," Mr. Farrell declared: "There is but one course before us—to pursue the path which in former periods of depression brought us in safety to higher levels of prosperity," and to maintain a "live and let live policy."

Fritz Thyssen, German industrialist and steel magnate, spoke of political and economic conditions in Germany and in the world and declared that there could be no sustained friendship between the nations as long as the treaty of Versailles and the burdens it imposed endured.

LAVAL CONFERS WITH HOOVER ON A WORLD AWRY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—In a discussion that began over the coffee and cigars in the White House dining room and that was continued until midnight from the recesses of armchairs in the Lincoln study President Hoover and Premier Laval of France tonight surveyed a world out of joint and exchanged views on how to set it right.

OGDEN L. MILLS.

Before commencing on their international chat, and in order that its basis might be made publicly clear, they authorized the issuance of the following joint statement:

"Both the President and Premier Laval wish it made clear that the conversations upon which they are engaged are solely in respect of such policies as each of the two governments can develop to expedite recovery from the world economic depression. There is no remote basis whatever for statements as to 'demands,' 'terms of settlement,' or any other like discussions. Happily, there are no controversies to be settled between France and America. None such exist. The sole purpose of these conversations is the earnest, frank exchange of views with a view to finding common ground for helpful action in the promotion of constructive progress in the world."

Mills Is Interpreter.

At the midnight conclusion of the talk, Undersecretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills, who acted as interpreter for the President, announced that tonight had proved a good beginning and that the conversation would be resumed again tomorrow. That was the only post-conference statement coming from the White House.

Counting their preliminary conversation this afternoon and allowing two hours out for dinner, the American President and the French premier talked and their assistants interpreted for more than six hours.

Only three other persons were present at the interview. They were Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, Mr. Mills, and M. Jacques Bizot, financial expert of the French foreign office, who served M. Laval as interpreter.

M. Laval and his daughter, Josée, arrived at the White House late in the afternoon to be the guests of the President and Mrs. Hoover until tomorrow noon.

At the dinner table, in addition to the officials who were met for the conference, there were Mrs. Hoover, Mrs. Stimson, Mlle. Laval, and Mlle. Raine Claudel, daughter of the French ambassador.

Discuss Many Topics.

According to the meager reports filtering out of the White House, the conversation after the dinner covered a wide range of subjects, including reduction of German reparations and allied war debts, reduction of armaments, revision of the Versailles treaty, extension of the Hoover moratorium, security pacts and consultative pacts, schemes to put teeth in the Kellogg-Briand anti-war pact, the Sino-Japanese war in Manchuria, the economic plight of Great Britain and Germany, the gold supply, and the true inwardness of the recent French raids on dollar exchange.

Much talk but little conclusion appears to be the net result up to date of the initial interchange of views between the heads of the French and American governments. Mr. Hoover and M. Laval found themselves too far apart in their opinions on some of the matters ever to hope to get together. On others they were in more or less agreement personally, though officially compelled to abide by different views held by the national legislatures of their respective countries.

Agree on Gold Standard.

Maintenance of the gold standard was virtually the only subject on which the President and the premier were able to agree without reservations. Neither yielded to the other in opposition to various schemes for the redistribution of the world's gold supply, of which France and the United States hold about 70 per cent, to the British proposal of an international monetary conference and to the agitation of the silverites for the adoption of international bimetallism.

As a result of the apparently irreconcilable viewpoints of Mr. Hoover and M. Laval on the most important questions they have under consideration the word went forth tonight that it would be a mistake to expect any agreements on policies to emanate from the conference. It was stated officially that what the heads of the two governments are engaged doing is the exploration of each other's mind.

Security Pacts Analyzed.

Thus M. Laval has explained to Mr. Hoover with a wealth of detail and the disclosure of numerous diplomatic secrets the reasons underlying the insistence of the French that they cannot afford to reduce armament unless all the powers, including the United States, are ready to guarantee the immunity of France from aggression.

Likewise Mr. Hoover has explained to M. Laval the no less adamantine repugnance of the American people to any blanket commitment to employ the armed forces of the United States in attempting to settle the quarrels of Europe and Asia.

While, therefore, it was evident the President and the premier were unable to agree on a common policy with respect to the more important matters under discussion, the conversations, it was stated, are producing a better understanding by each of the other's views, responsibilities, and restriction of action, and laying the foundation for possible future agreements between the two governments. It was emphasized that agreements are made by governments, not individuals, and hence it would be a mistake to expect too much of the White House conversations.

Will Continue Talk.

Mr. Hoover and his distinguished guest will continue their talk tomorrow forenoon and at 3 p. m. the President is to receive the press, presumably to make a statement on the results of the conference. It is possible that M. Laval also will be present. During the afternoon the premier and his daughter will go to Woodley to be the guests of Secretary and Mrs. Stimson until Sunday night.

The premier made his official call on Secretary Stimson shortly before noon. The two officials strolled on the balcony off the secretary's office for nearly an hour laying the groundwork for the White House discussion tonight. Mr. Stimson speaks French well enough to get along without an interpreter. Mr. Hoover confesses his French too rusty for current use. M. Laval says his greatest regret is that he cannot speak English.

At Tomb of Unknown Soldier.

Premier Laval's first visit today was to the tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington, where he laid a wreath in honor of the men who died fighting in France when this country and France were allied against the armies of Germany.

M. Laval was accompanied by the French ambassador on his visit to the shrine in Arlington. After placing a wreath on the tomb he stood with bowed head for several moments. The wreath, composed of red roses, with white chrysanthemums, oak leaves, and ferns, bore an inscription in French, "To the Unknown American Soldier from the President of the Council of Ministers of France."

An army band played the "Marseillaise" as the prime minister, accompanied by Ambassador Claudel, Warren D. Robbins of the state department and Brig. Gen. E. T. Collins, walked down the marble steps leading from the amphitheater to the tomb.

A company of infantry presented arms as he advanced to the tomb. "Magnificent!" exclaimed the premier as he surveyed the amphitheater and the tomb.

Salute Fired at Fort Myer.

As the party passed Fort Myer a salute of nineteen guns was fired. The prime minister left his automobile and walked to a position near the four artillery guns and stood leaning on his walking stick until the salute was concluded.

When M. Laval reached the capitol, where he was to pay a formal call on Vice President Curtis, he found that the Vice President was not in his office in the capitol, but, through a misunderstanding, was awaiting the prime minister in the senate office building. M. Laval was shown the Vice President's office and about the capitol and then went to the Vice President's office in the office building, where he was cordially received by Mr. Curtis.

After talking with the Vice President on the desirability of such visits as his as a means of increasing international coöperation, M. Laval returned to the capitol, where he visited Chief Justice Hughes for fifteen minutes.

The conversations with the Vice President and the chief justice were conducted through an interpreter. Vice President Curtis has French blood in his veins, one of his grandfathers having been a Frenchman. Until he was 8 years old he spoke French, he said, after the visit of M. Laval, but not since that time.

LEWIS ASKS U. S. TO QUIT SENDING CASH TO EUROPE

Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Senator J. Hamilton Lewis of Illinois tonight told the Little Rock Bar association the United States is rendering itself impotent in the cause of peace by lending to European countries, and outlined a proposal of relief credit to American manufacturers and merchants which he said he intends to place before congress.

Senator Lewis, who has been resting in Hot Springs for the last week, was introduced by Senator Joe T. Robinson of Arkansas.

In his criticism of loans to Europe by the United States Senator Lewis maintained that "if America does not halt the sending of money to Europe it will be impossible for President Hoover to succeed with his proposed plan of national financial relief."

The bankers will be defeated, he asserted, for want of money.

Saws Off Branch of Tree; It Falls, Kills a Friend

Herman Albright, 1438 West 61st street, climbed into a tree at 61st and Bishop streets yesterday to saw off a limb. Among those who stood below watching him work was Gust Clinter, 64 years old, 6100 Bishop street, a retired carpenter. When the heavy limb was sawed through Clinter failed to move quickly enough and it struck him on the head. He died last night at the Southwest hospital.

SUPREME COURT ACQUITS FAHERTY IN EXPERT CASE

Decision Also Absolves Two Others.

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—The Illinois Supreme court today relieved Michael J. Faherty from responsibility for handing out $1,732,279 of the taxpayers' money in the form of "experts' fees" while he was president of the Chicago board of local improvements.

JUSTICE HEARD.

The court reversed a decision of the Circuit court of Cook county, which had held that this sum had been paid out illegally and which ordered restitution of that amount, along with $652,237 as interest, a total of $2,245,604. In 1928 Judge Hugo Friend of Chicago held that Faherty and his associates "were guilty of breach of trust as officers of the city and of fraud and corruption."

Coffin and Waller, Too.

In freeing Faherty from that decision the court at Springfield also released two of his fellow defendants, Percy B. Coffin, a sort of assistant "expert," and Edward C. Waller Jr., who received full pay as an "expert," from their share of the responsibility for the internationally famous scandal.

The opinion of the court was written and delivered by Justice Oscar E. Heard of Freeport, whose election to the Supreme bench was considered among politicians as a coup for Len Small, former governor, who again is a candidate for the governorship. There was no dissenting opinion filed.

What High Court Found.

"There is no evidence showing or tending to show that Faherty ever received any moneys from any of the experts, either for himself or for a contribution to any political organization.

"When the experts received their fees the money belonged to them and they had a legal right to spend it or give it away as they saw fit. It is a matter of common knowledge that under our system of selecting officers and candidates for offices large sums of money are used in excess of necessary expenses and there has grown up a most pernicious practice of levying assessments, not legally collectible, but which are quasi-voluntarily paid, upon office holders by the party or faction to which the office holders or appointees owe their position.

"This practice merits condemnation in the severest terms, but the rectification is legislative and not a judicial function."

There was comment here that nowhere in the opinion, so far as could be seen in the hurried examination possible, did Justice Heard mention the huge sum paid out to the experts.

Recalls Earlier Decision.

This is the second decision of this character handed down by the Supreme court and it was based almost entirely upon the previous opinion, which was quoted liberally, as if the two cases were almost identical so far as the principal defendants were concerned.

In the first case the defendants were the Republican mayor under whose administration the "fees" were distributed, and his city controller, George F. Harding. In that instance the court held, among other things, that there was no proof that the defendants had received any of the money or had taken part in a conspiracy and that the only proof against them was of "negligence" or "nonactions."

That opinion was written by Justice Warren Orr of Carthage, who had been elected to the bench only four months earlier.

Where Faherty Case Differs.

The Faherty case differed largely from its predecessor in that it was contended that Faherty had much more direct and accurate knowledge of the amounts paid to the "experts" and the actual labors they performed. But this point was not mentioned in yesterday's decision so far as could be noted.

Both of these cases were instituted by THE TRIBUNE and prosecuted at its own expense in 1921. They were based on payments between 1915 and 1919 in connection with major public improvements for which the taxpayers had voted city bond issues of $28,000,000. During the progress of the trial two of the experts made restitution. Ernest H. Lyons repaid $108,631 and Arthur S. Merigold turned back $30,281.

Huge Loot of Funds.

In his decision, Circuit Judge Friend held that the following amounts had been paid out:

Ernest H. Lyons	577,426
Edward C. Waller Jr.	577,426
Frank H. Mears	400,418
Austin J. Lynch	544,188
Total	$2,917,866

"The court's findings," said Judge Friend, "as to the existence and accomplishment of the conspiracy for the two-fold purpose of financing the political activities of the Thompson organization and for private benefit of members of the conspiracy lead to the conclusion that all the payments . . . were utterly illegal and void and that restitution must be made."

As to Coffin and Lyons.

As already stated, most of the new matter in the Heard opinion concerned the relationships between Coffin and Expert Lyons.

"He (Lyons) and Coffin," read this part of the finding, "had been warm friends for many years, enlisting and serving together in the Spanish-American war and being associated in real estate dealings for a period.

"Coffin was at the time president of the civil service commission of Chicago at a salary of $7,500. Lyons offered Coffin 10 per cent of the net receipts of his business, which was much better for Coffin from a financial standpoint than the position he held. Coffin accepted the offer, resigned as president of the civil service commission, and the evidence shows that thereafter he made his headquarters in Lyons' office and spent a portion of each day there: and to the end of 1922 his receipt from Lyons, as shown by Lyons' books, aggregated about $77,000.

Tells of Coffin's Offices.

"Coffin had for years taken a great interest in politics and had held various offices, among them being clerk of the civil service commission, member of the commission, and business manager of the board of education. He had further political ambitions."

The opinion then recited Coffin's relations with the administration during the era of the "experts," saying he was a friend of the mayor, was affiliated with his organization, and "had for years contributed to politics most of his income over his living expenses."

"During his employment by Lyons," the opinion continued, "he contributed to the organization about one-half of his receipts from Lyons. It is claimed by defendant in error that Coffin's employment was a part of the conspiracy alleged in the bill and was for the purpose of establishing a conduit for Lyons' money between Lyons and the organization.

Denies Knowledge of Conspiracy.

"Coffin testified as a witness on cross-examination that he was never aware of any conspiracy . . . to the effect that he was to go into Lyons' employ for the purpose of establishing himself as a conduit or means of getting the money out of Lyons in order to be paid to any political organization or for any political purpose; that he never had any understanding, agreement, or conversation with the men mentioned or any of them or any other person in which it was stated, indicated, or intimated that he was to go into Lyons' employ for the purpose of acting as a conduit for the purposes stated.

"Coffin, as a witness for defendant in error, was the only witness on the subject.

DECLARES BERLIN UNABLE TO PAY 6 BILLION LOANS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Oct. 23.—"Germany borrowed a total of more than $6,240,000,000 from foreign countries and she will not be able to repay them in February when the agreement to freeze the short term credits expires," Gottfried Treviranus, minister of transportation, declared tonight speaking at a world trade association meeting in Berlin. The minister explained that the greatest part of these millions was borrowed by Germany to pay reparations, the value of which to date amounts to $8,500,000,000.

"What Germany must do now is to present an honest, clean cut plan for amortization of her debts abroad," he continued. "She cannot pay more than $250,000,000 annually. Germany must be permitted to earn these millions by selling goods abroad."

JUDGE FRIEND'S DECISION IN EXPERT CASE

A summary of the principal parts of the decision of Circuit Judge Hugo M. Friend in the experts' fees case, delivered on June 20, 1928, and now overturned by the Supreme court, is as follows:

"The essential facts are clearly established. The Thompson group in its quest for the control of the city, county and state offices, required vast sums to maintain its organization and for campaign purposes.

"To meet these expenses, which became constantly pressing obligations, a plan was conceived and carried out through which nearly $3,000,000, constituting trust funds of the city, was paid to five experts who contributed large portions of their fees to help defray these political obligations. More than $2,500,000 was paid illegaly after the specific appropriations became exhausted, in violation of the council order and the appropriation ordinance.

Faherty's Part Is Told.

"In order to create fees sufficiently large to meet the needs of the political situation, Faherty, with the cooperation of the chairman of the finance committee, departed from the prevailing system of the board, and, in contravention of the statutes requiring commissioners to determine values and make up assessment rolls, substituted experts for commissioners and compensated them by making wholesale appraisals on a percentage basis instead of the prevailing per diem rate.

"To give effect to the plan thus conceived a policy of misrepresentation and concealment of material facts was employed by Faherty and the experts in their dealings with the finance committee and the city council. . . . Bills were withheld by Faherty and the experts to conceal the true situation from the finance committee and the council.

"Appraisals on a fictitious basis of valuation were approved by Faherty to enhance the amount of fees paid. Employés in the office of the board of local improvements were corrupted by bestowing upon them gratuities to the extent of $3,100 for facilitating the approval of bills and vouchers. And the spurious five year contracts were improvised for the purpose of justifying the enormous fees.

"Through these various steps public funds were diverted from the city treasury and by devious means applied for political debts of the Thompson organization. Coffin, Nichols and Brautigam were used as conduits for passing portions of these funds to their ultimate destination.

"As a result of these events certain of the defendants and political adherents of Thompson were personally enriched, and the heavy obligations for political purposes incurred by Thompson, Harding and their associates for which they became jointly and severally liable were reduced by the vast amounts contributed by the experts, directly or indirectly, to the Thompson organization.

Holds Defendants to Blame.

"These results could not have been obtained without the concerted action of Thompson, Harding and Faherty with the other defendants. Concert of action is stamped on every fact and circumstance in evidence. Step by step these defendants moved forward toward the ultimate goal. One act complemented the other in the plan which resulted in the diversion of public funds.

"Thompson and Harding, by their answers deny the charges of conspiracy, but no evidence was offered to support their denials. They both rested at the close of the complainant's case and submitted the cause to the court for determination upon the record made by the complainant.

"Their answers to the charges were that they had no knowledge of the facts upon which the charges are based, but the record rebuts that contention."

Sees Proof of Guilt.

Judge Friend then reviewed his view of the facts which he construed as proving that both the former mayor and the former controller knew of the conspiracy charged, and then continued:

"These two defendants occupied positions of highest trust and confidence. Clothed by the statute with powers so broad as to enable them to make careful inquiry into the facts brought to their attention, and burdened with responsibilities commensurate with such powers, they steadfastly refused to follow up the various avenues of inquiry that would have disclosed the full facts and prevented the illegal payments.

"Failing in this duty, they are chargeable with knowledge, and, not having taken the stand to deny knowledge, the court cannot absolve them on the ground they did not know what it was their duty to know.

"Indifference in the face of repeated warnings, mute when silence gave consent, defiant when they should have been wielding the hammer of outrageous indignation over the conduct of others, they refused to act. They cannot now shield their official delinquency under a cloak of ignorance and be heard to assert they acted in good faith."

"His testimony is replete with contradictions, evasions, and denials, and the conclusions to be drawn therefrom leave but little room for the contention that he acted innocently through inadvertence or in good faith. Without his active coöperation the fraudulent scheme could not have been carried out."

Here the court listed the facts brought out in the trial which he said established Faherty's guilt.

"His acts," Judge Friend continued, "complement the acts of other defendants in almost every instance and form a chain of events which cannot be isolated from the whole evidence or explained on any theory consistent with his innocence."

Takes Up Go-Betweens.

Turning to the three "conduits" through which the city's funds traveled to the political organization's treasury, Judge Friend said, in part:

"The evidence as to Coffin, Brautigam, and Koch is so astounding as to require but little further comment. Testifying as witnesses for the complainant, they corroborated much of the complainant's evidence and gave testimony extremely damaging to themselves. When called in their own behalf they did little more than categorically deny the charges of conspiracy.

"Coffin and Brautigam rendered no service worthy of consideration. To consider the enormous payments to them in any light except that they were made in accordance with a fixed plan would be absurd."

BORAH TELLS PARIS PRESS: NO SECURITY PACT!

Senator Frank in His Views of Situation.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—When it's tomorrow morning in Paris, the readers of French news will know how at least one important "senate irreconcilable" feels. For Senator William E. Borah, insurgent Republican of Idaho, this afternoon told the dozen French newspaper men accompanying Premier Laval just what the chairman of the senate foreign relations committee thinks about the international problems now under discussion.

WM. E. BORAH. [Harris & Ewing.]

No security pact! the Idaho senator told the French reporters. Nor will there be any disarmament in Europe until the Versailles treaty has been modified to curtail reparations and to readjust now unfairly drawn boundaries, he said.

He saw no bright prospects for the coming Geneva disarmament conference, and he declared the situation in the orient is ominous.

He himself, Senator Borah explained, would be willing to cancel war debts owed the United States provided Europe would cancel reparations owed by Germany. He was willing, though, that Germany be required to recompense France and Belgium for direct damages, if these could be equitably estimated at this late date.

No Longer Moratoriums.

The time has passed for moratoriums; the time has arrived for cuts in international payments, said the senator.

And flatly he told them that the cleavage between politics and economics in our dealings with Europe was as clear today as it had been on the day Washington made his farewell address.

The senator's answers to the Frenchmen's questions took on added importance because they are substantially those which he will make to Premier Laval following Secretary of State Stimson's dinner tomorrow night. By the French premier's request he and Senator Borah will be given the privacy of the study at Woodley for a chat.

Senator Borah met Premier Laval at the White House last night. The senator, despite his senate office, and, like Senator Hiram Johnson, political enemy of the President, was left off the dinner list until an eleventh hour phone call informed him that an "oversight" had occurred and that, of course, he was to come.

He had praise for M. Laval today, terming him "direct, candid, and able." He was sure the premier's visit would result in good aside from any specific results attained.

To build up an organization for "security" under the Versailles treaty, Senator Borah told the French correspondents, means "peace by sheer force and not the peace which is based on contentment, with people satisfied that justice has been done."

"You are not going to get disarmament in Europe," he declared, "so long as certain conditions arising out of the Versailles treaty continue to exist. Among these is the Polish corridor. Or take Hungary, for example. Hungary is divided into five parts, and is kept so by force of arms. Jugo-Slavia, Czecho-Slovakia, and Rumania will not disarm while a part of the territory they hold is in dispute."

Economic pressure, Senator Borah declared, might work with a small nation, but applied to a larger power was tantamount to a declaration of war and would inevitably lead to war.

SUPREME COURT FREES STANTON IN ZUTA KILLING

Danny Stanton, public enemy, yesterday won his long fight against extradition to Wisconsin for trial as the murderer of Jack Zuta when the state Supreme court at Springfield ordered the gangster released. Stanton has been held as a fugitive from justice on a requisition from Wisconsin. The decision also applies to Edgar Smith, Stanton's bodyguard. But Smith was shot to death by gang enemies last July.

DANNY STANTON.

The decision of the Supreme court was regarded as attacking, to some degree, the credibility of ballistics evidence. Stanton and his companion were held on the testimony of Col. Calvin C. Goddard, ballistics expert, that bullets fired from a revolver in their possession had the same markings as the bullets found in the body of Zuta. In opposition to this evidence, Stanton and Smith produced alibi witnesses, who swore that they were in Chicago the night that Zuta was murdered in Wisconsin.

Stanton and Smith were arrested six weeks after the murder of Zuta, Aug. 1, 1930.

The Supreme court judges, in their decision that Stanton ought not to be extradited to Wisconsin, declared that the proof in the record showed that the men were not in Wisconsin when the crime was committed.

The Supreme court yesterday upheld a sentence of life imprisonment imposed upon Samuel Howard Dorr for the murder of William J. O'Brien, street car conductor. The murder was committed by Dorr in O'Brien's home. Dorr had been carrying on a love affair with O'Brien's wife.

DRUGGIST FREED AFTER QUIZ.

Morris Beck, owner of the Racine pharmacy at 237 South Racine avenue, held following a fire which destroyed the store early yesterday, was ordered released last night when no evidence could be developed linking him with the fire.

Before Bar Fight Marred Whoopee Cruise

Scene on S. S. Majestic, which carried 476 passengers from New York on a merrymaking cruise of 100 miles out into the Atlantic Wednesday night and returned with its bar depleted and several passengers under the doctor's care when a fight started in the barroom, which had to be closed temporarily. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Whoopee Cruise of Liner Brightened by a Bar Fight

New York, Oct. 23.—[Special.]—They're having little gang wars at sea now. The White Star liner Majestic steamed a hundred miles out to sea Wednesday night and steamed back with its bar depleted and a little group of its passengers in bandages. There was a minor war between detectives and a coterie of serious drinkers and disappointed gamblers at dawn yesterday.

Three of them needed the doctor's services, faces were cut, ears were sliced by broken glass, and one man was felled by a blackjack.

The Majestic is the world's largest liner, 55,000 tons, and its owners sent it out at 6 o'clock Wednesday night on a 100 mile "cruise to nowhere." There were 476 passengers on board, ranging from elderly couples who went along for the rest and relaxation and sea air down to young pairs.

Dice Rolling Stopped.

The bar opened at 8:30 p. m. Wednesday, after the ship had passed the twelve mile limit. Drinking began moderately enough. Dinner wasn't especially "wet," and after dinner a good many passengers went to the movie in the lounge and others strolled the decks in the moonlight, and the minority stayed at the bar.

In the minority were some determined gamblers. Whether they were exhilarated amateurs or serious professionals could not be learned, but they made their bets like professionals and started crap games on the deck at $20 a roll. The ship's detectives quickly put a stop to that, and the gamblers adjourned to the bar.

Somebody swung on a detective, and Van Short of the line's staff sent an emergency call for six International Mercantile Marine detectives, who were taking the trip as passengers as a reward for some good work recently. They leaped out of bed and arrived in time to be of considerable assistance.

Detective Eddie Cleary laid out the ringleader of the rowdies. Clyde Dickson, another detective, stopped two or three side fights and four men jumped on him and laid him out.

New Use for Highball.

One small man in a dinner coat tried to separate two of the fighters and was laid out. A pretty girl with him mopped his bleeding face with a handkerchief soaked in a scotch highball.

Dawn was creeping into the lounge when the augmented force of detectives finally cleaned out the bar, closed it down temporarily and the doctor had everybody bandaged and the casualties packed off to bed.

Today word came from Washington that a protest against such "whoopee" cruises had been filed with the secretary of the treasury by Capt. John F. Milliken, secretary of the Neptune association, an organization of deck officers of the merchant marine. Capt. Milliken declared that the vessels brought liquor into port for beverage purposes only. An investigation was ordered.

3 BANDITS HOLD UP COUNTRY BANK; LOOT IS $2,780

Three unmasked young gunmen held up the State bank of Union, a small village in McHenry county twenty miles northeast of Elgin, just after it opened early yesterday, compelled two employés to lie upon the floor, and escaped with $2,780. Two men did the actual robbing while a third remained in a car outside and drove his confederates away.

Otto H. Schutte of Elgin, the cashier, and Clarence M. Siems, his assistant, were arranging the counters for the day's business when the robbers entered. One jumped to the counter and clambered over the top of the cage, not attempting to force the employés to open the cage door.

The bandit inside the cage then opened the cage door and was joined by his companion. Both proceeded to scoop up all money on hand, stowing it in bags. They ran from the bank to their car, driving toward Elgin. A Chicago salesman, John J. James Jr., was passing and noted the license number which had been issued to Robert Rasmussen, 1209 East 79th street, Chicago. It was believed that the car had been stolen.

RAIL WORKERS IN SOUTH TAKE VOLUNTARY CUT

New York, Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Voluntary acceptance of a wage reduction by train service employés of a railroad was announced today in the form of a 10 per cent cut taken by a large number of workers on the Gulf, Mobile and Northern railroad and its subsidiary, New Orleans Great Northern.

The lower rate of wages has been accepted to last as long as the Gulf, Mobile and Northern fails to cover fixed charges. Twenty-five per cent of the train service employés of the Gulf, Mobile and Northern and 1 per cent on the New Orleans Great Northern accepted the reduction. This constituted 17 per cent for the entire system.

In addition to the reduction in wages of the train service employés, 94 per cent of the salaried officers and workers of the system have had their income cut 15 per cent. This includes 95 per cent on the Gulf, Mobile and Northern and 89 per cent on New Orleans Great Northern.

Gulf, Mobile and Northern earned its fixed charges 1.55 times in 1930. In the first eight months this year the net operating income was $38,184 compared with $366,459 in 1930.

When the salary reductions were announced in September it was stated that the resultant saving was equal to about 22 per cent of the carrier's charges and taxes.

Wage reductions to be accepted voluntarily by the workers have been advocated frequently as a means of alleviating the stress under which the railroads have been as a result of reduced earnings.

A large minority stock interest in Gulf, Mobile and Northern has been acquired recently by the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad.

Boost Wages as Help

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 23.—(AP)—A five per cent increase in the wages of all employés, described as a gesture of appreciation for cooperation of the workers and an indication of confidence in the future, was announced tonight by officials of Ruedy's Department store.

ORDER DRUGGAN INTO COURT TO EXPLAIN LOANS

Seize Gangster's Home for Bank Debts.

Terry Druggan, public enemy and gangland's chief brewer, yesterday was served with a subpoena to appear before Circuit Judge Michael Feinberg next Tuesday. His appearance was demanded in connection with the judge's search for assets to satisfy depositors' claims against the defunct West Central State bank. Testimony during the three day investigation has disclosed that Terry was a depositor and frequent borrower from the institution.

The service of the subpoena, which was issued by Judge Feinberg last Tuesday, was obtained through Attorney Peter Sissman, Druggan's lawyer, who communicated with the court. Druggan, the head of his family, will represent his younger brother, Willie, who owes the bank $3,500, obtained without posting security.

Terry himself will be called upon to explain a loan of $22,000 which he secured from the bank on his signature alone. Of that sum $12,000 has already been recovered with the foreclosure on Wednesday of a mortgage against Druggan's apartment house at 7064 Greenview avenue by Attorney Jacob L. Fox, representing the receiver of the bank.

It was the sumptuously furnished apartment in the same building which Druggan formerly occupied that drew the attention of the court yesterday. Louis Klusman, a former broker who testified that he was a boyhood friend of Druggan, swore on Thursday that he had bought the luxurious furnishings for $3,000 from his gangster pal. Since the purchase several weeks ago he has been living in the rooms, he said.

Judge Feinberg informed Klusman that he did not believe the story. The judge ordered him to reconsider his testimony, commune with his brother, a dentist, and return.

When he entered court yesterday Klusman said he was willing to forego all claims to the furniture, saying that he would sign it over to the receiver in a formal bill of sale. Judge Feinberg accepted the offer and ordered Chester R. Davis, trust officer for the Chicago Title and Trust company, to place custodians in the apartment immediately.

The furniture and the furnishings, which include expensive oriental rugs, morocco bound volumes in an extensive library, fine linen and silver, and silken draperies, will be sold at public auction. Druggan purchased them for $15,000 and they now are valued at $10,000, Attorney Fox said.

Because of the appeals by private citizens who have asked Judge Feinberg to investigate other closed banks, he issued a statement yesterday in which he asserted that it was the right of depositors to know of the transactions which led to the closing of their banks.

Bandit's Third Gun Fools His Captors; He Flees, Bride Held

A three gun hoodlum, aided by his red haired bride, turned from captive to captor last night when he drew a hidden revolver and disarmed two policemen and a hotel detective after they had arrested him. The hoodlum, identified as Louis Longo, 24 years old, said to be from New York, escaped supposedly armed with six revolvers. His bride, Peggy McCaffery Longo, 20, who described herself as a "little country girl from Detroit," was arrested.

The policemen and hotel detective who became captives after a momentary period as captors, are Roy Kent and Guy Willoughby of the first district and Frank A. Brassalli, employed by the Hotel Sherman. They sought to arrest Longo as the man who on Oct. 13 robbed Erward A. Kasselle in his hotel room of $70 cash and $970 in jewelry. Last night Brassalli called at the police station and asked for help in arresting Longo. Kent and Willoughby were assigned.

Cornered in His Room.

They drove to 948 Edgecomb place and rapped on an apartment door where Longo lived. He opened the door, and was immediately covered with three revolvers. Alongside him stood his wife.

Longo was frisked, and a gun taken from his pocket. Another revolver was found in a suitcase. The room was then searched for stolen jewelry and a ring, not yet identified as Kasselle's, was found. The policemen continued their search, seeking particularly a platinum wrist watch, valued at $300. The prisoner was asked where it was hidden.

"In the bedroom," he replied. He volunteered to get. Kent, Willoughby and Brassalli, secure in the belief that the two confiscated guns represented all Longo's arsenal, pocketed their own weapons and accompanied him to the bedroom.

Produces Third Gun.

Suddenly Longo reached behind a picture. He whirled grasping an automatic pistol.

"Put them up, it's my turn now," he commanded. The startled policemen obeyed. "I'd like to kill you," he snarled, turning to Willoughby, "I don't like coppers." Longo called his wife and she disarmed the policemen. He then took $4 from Willoughby and $6 from Brassalli. Longo next ordered his wife to leave and meet him later. After again threatening Kent, Willoughby and Brassalli, Longo backed out the door.

Simultaneously the guns disappeared. The crestfallen policemen notified Town Hall police, and Lieut. James Walsh sent Sergt. Everett Mullaney to the apartment. While they were waiting, Mrs. Longo reappeared. She was seized. She talked in a baby voice and said she threw the three confiscated guns of the policemen under a bush outside, but they were never found. Mrs. Longo said she met Longo four weeks ago and was married to him only three weeks ago in Detroit. She belived him to be a burlesque actor, she said.

CHARGE HOODLUM FROLICS IN JAIL; SHERIFF NAMED

Agents Tell of Liberty Granted Rench.

A story of booze parties in the Grundy county jail, where Tony Rench, political minion of Al Capone, is a federal prisoner, and of his being privileged to come and go at his will was told yesterday by agents of the department of justice. Meanwhile, Assistant United States Attorney Edward A. Fisher drew up contempt of court proceedings naming Sheriff Perucca.

EDW. A. FISHER.

Rench was ousted as the president of the village board of Stickney, Capone vice domain, after County Judge Jarecki found the ballot boxes in the April, 1929, election had been stuffed. Last February he began serving a year in the Grundy county jail at Morris under a federal sentence for flouting the dry laws at his La Ruth bungalow, 4035 Oak Park avenue, Stickney.

Recall Druggan-Lake Case.

The privileges accorded Rench during his ostensible imprisonment, as reported by the federal agents, correspond to the freedom with which Terry Druggan and Frankie Lake, beer barons, walked in and out of the Cook county jail six years ago. The Druggan-Lake incident sent Sheriff Peter Hoffman to jail for thirty days and Warden Wesley Westbrook for four months.

Rench was not confined in a cell, but was quartered in the sheriff's home, in the front section of the 60 year old two story stone jail at Morris, the agents reported to Fisher. He carried keys to all parts of the building, including the arsenal in the sheriff's quarters, from which a machine gun was stolen last March. Mike Mattalo, a Chicago hoodlum, was acquitted on a charge of possessing this machine gun in the Criminal court Thursday.

Last June, the agents reported, Rench went to Joliet and gave a big party in the Slovenia hall on Chicago avenue. County Judge W. G. Peacock and State's Attorney Frank L. Flood of Grundy county are alleged to have attended this party. On other occasions Rench is said to have visited his home in Stickney and roadhouses in the vicinity of Morris, which is sixty miles southwest of Chicago. Once he was seen to enter a speakeasy on West Washington street, Morris, accompanied by a woman.

Another Enjoys Freedom.

Matt Blazer, an Oak Park bootlegger, who finished a term of one year last March, allegedly enjoyed the same freedom accorded Rench until his release. Sheriff Perucca denied that Rench was given the run of the jail.

"I have merely followed the action of my predecessors and the instructions of United States Marshal Henry C. W. Laubenheimer of Chicago in handling federal prisoners," said the sheriff.

"I was told by Marshal Laubenheimer that all federal prisoners are put to work wherever possible, on the outside if necessary. I put Rench to work cleaning the jail garage, washing the courthouse windows and mowing the lawns. If he or any other federal prisoner took more liberties than were necessary, I didn't know it." The sheriff, 32 years old, Republican, was elected last Dec. 1.

The contempt of court action names Perucca, Rench and Blazer, and seeks a rule to show cause why they shquld not be punished for contempt. It will be presented to Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward, who presided at Rench's trial, when he returns from a court session at Freeport next week. Judge Woodward is said to have ordered the investigation after hearing rumors of Rench's comings and goings.

BUSINESS SENDS HOT RETORT TO U. S. FARM CHIEF

Charles A. Wilson, president of the Federation of American Business with membership in sixty different lines of business in 29 states, branded as untrue yesterday the statement made by James C. Stone, federal farm board chairman, on Thursday that his federation was "carrying on false propaganda."

Stone, in addressing a convention of farm equipment manufacturers, charged that the federation, whose slogan is "Take the government out of business," is seeking to deny to farmers the government help now accorded other industries.

"It is hardly good taste for the farm board to question sincerity when the board has been charged by farmers with having dealt in falsehood, misrepresentation and chicanery from its very inception," declared Wilson. "Not a dollar has been spent for the service of propagandists. Our program for getting government out of business has been strongly endorsed by business and agriculture alike."

Wilson charged the farm board with "mad policies" that "have paralyzed the American farm and destroyed, perhaps permanently, foreign markets for wheat and cotton."

"You have stood silent," Wilson added, "while farm machinery makers poured machinery into Russia on credit with which to balloon her wheat production while you held our surplus of one crop as a burden upon another so that farmers this year have in many cases received less than 25 cents a bushel for wheat."

Cult Leader Is Taken to Prison for Attack on Girl

Joseph Maria Abbate, garbed in the ceremonial robes he wore as self-appointed "celestial messenger," accompanied by twenty-eight other prisoners, was taken to the Joliet penitentiary yesterday to begin a life sentence for the rape of a 15 year old girl. Abbate, head of a religious cult at 2021 De Kalb street, was sentenced by Chief Justice Harry Fisher in the Criminal court. The complainant was Lucia Vitiello, whose mother was one of Abbate's followers.

JULIAN BARNETT.

MRS. ADELE C. BARNETT.

Gets Injunction

Mrs. Adele Christen Barnett, widow of H. J. Christen, architect, who was killed in the Kansas plane crash in which Knute Rockne was also a victim, filed suit for divorce yesterday against Julian Barnett, jeweler, whom she married on Sept. 10.

Barnett is the owner of a jewelry store in the Edgewater Beach hotel. Mrs. Barnett formerly resided at the Belmont hotel. She charges that within a month after their marriage, her husband was unfaithful to her.

Christen, the first husband, was killed as he was flying to Los Angeles to seek a reconciliation with his wife. She returned to Chicago for the burial. Five months later, she married Barnett who is several years her junior."

Mrs. Barnett alleged in her suit that she advanced Barnett $20,000 eight days before their marriage on his plea that a large bank balance would benefit his credit standing. She obtained an injunction before Judge Joseph Sabath preventing her husband from disposing of his assets pending settlement of the suit.

S. R. McCORMICK DECISION UPSET BY HIGH COURT

The Illinois Supreme court yesterday ruled against Mrs. Katherine Dexter McCormick in her litigation to obtain the appointment of a conservator in the Illinois courts for her husband, Stanley R. McCormick. He has been declared incompetent and now is in a Santa Barbara sanitarium. Mrs. McCormick was opposed in her suit by Harold F. McCormick and Cyrus McCormick, brothers, and Mrs. Anita McCormick Blaine, the sister of her husband.

In its ruling the Supreme court reversed the opinion of the Appellate court, holding that the publication of notice and service by mail on McCormick in California, did not confer jurisdiction upon the Illinois courts. The higher court held that the Appellate justices had erred in reversing the judgment of the Circuit court in Chicago.

Body Found on Roadside; May Be Shooting Victim

Brannigan had been separated from his wife, who lives at 7607 South Wood street. There was a small hole over the left temple. His skull had been fractured. The police were unable to determine whether he had been shot or struck by an automobile.

MINNEAPOLIS — State at Jackson CHICAGO — ST. PAUL

MRS. JUDD GIVES UP TO POLICE IN TRUNK SLAYING

Ends Five Day Hunt in Los Angeles.

ley, employé of the establishment, who had driven the automobile which picked up Mrs. Judd, sought to intervene and was struck by one of the officers.

Shortly before 6:30 o'clock the woman came down a stairway into the undertaking parlors, leaning on the arms of her husband and Mr. Russill. As news photographers and reporters gathered, her knees trembled and she had to be supported. She threw a coat over her head and moaned as she was taken away.

At the Georgia street police hospital Head Police Surgeon J. Kirkpatrick, after an examination, reported that in addition to the bullet wound in her left hand, the woman had an injured right hand, innumerable bruises all over her body, was tubercular, fatigued to the point of collapse, and in "extremely shaky condition."

She was given an anesthetic and a bullet was removed from her hand. It had shattered the index finger and lodged at the base of the middle finger. As the woman was badly infected she was given an injection of anti-tetanus serum.

Babbles Under Anesthetic.

While under the anesthetic the woman babbled incoherently to her husband who stood beside the operating table.

"O, doctor, I gave myself up because it hurt so," she moaned. "I was afraid of lockjaw."

There was an interval of silence, then the troubled voice began again:

"O, doctor . . . I fought so hard . . . I've been so mean . . . Kiss me I wish there was a Catholic priest here . . ."

In disclosing that Mrs. Judd had spent the last four days in a sanitarium, the attorneys added that she had full access to newspapers and kept herself fully informed on the search which was being conducted for her throughout Arizona and California and at Mexican border points. This report of her hiding in a sanitarium does not agree with her husband's statement that she was in a vacant through her period of hiding.

Had a Narrow Escape.

The attorneys did not name the sanitarium. They said that she narrowly escaped capture when two Los Angeles policemen walked into the place last Tuesday while she was having her injured hand dressed.

"The officers questioned Mrs. Judd," they said, "but she managed to throw them off and they left."

A statement explaining their part in surrendering Mrs. Judd was issued by the lawyers, Russill and Cantillon. It says:

"This morning, during the inquest, we received a telephone call from Winnie Ruth Judd. She stated she desired to communicate with her husband, Dr. Judd; that she was wounded and blood poisoning had set in on her left arm.

"It was necessary because of the high excitement to find some quiet place to consult with her. This was arranged through the kind offers of Gus Alvarez and Dave Malloy. The meeting was arranged in front of a downtown hotel (the Biltmore) and Mrs. Judd was taken to the undertaking parlors of Alvarez & Moore.

"Mrs. Judd was in a hysterical state and badly in need of medical attention. It appears that her left arm was infected. Her husband, Dr. Judd, administered to her.

"After a consultation it was decided that Mrs. Judd should immediately surrender. Sheriff Traeger, Undersheriff Biscailuz, and Detective Chief Taylor of the Los Angeles police department were immediately notified.

"We wish to thank the press of Los Angeles for its cooperation. Without that assistance we believe it would have been difficult ever to have communicated with Mrs. Judd.

"We have not had time to determine proper steps to take in behalf of our client. We believe it to be to her best interest that her case be not prejudged. We have advised her that she has a constitutional right to remain silent. Suffice to say that it is our opinion that she has a defense well recognized in law."

How Crime Was Discovered.

The discovery of the sensational double murder came last Monday when a transfer man noticed blood oozing from two trunks Mrs. Judd had shipped from Phoenix to Los Angeles last Sunday, and refused to give her trunks, when she appeared to claim them, unless she would open them in his presence. Mrs. Judd then fled with her brother, young McKinnell, although she did not disclose to him that the trunks contained the bodies of Mrs. Leroi and Miss Samuelson.

When she fled from the station she also abandoned a suitcase in the women's restroom, which contained part of Miss Samuelson's dismembered body.

McKinnell stated that his sister, in asking him to drive her to the railroad station, had asked him if he would dump the two trunks in the ocean for her. When the pair were unable to remove the trunks, McKinnell said his sister told him "I'd better beat it," and got out of her brother's automobile on a downtown street corner.

Phoenix Police Doubt Story.

Phoenix, Ariz., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Arizona authorities, informed tonight of Mrs. Winnie Ruth Judd's surrender and of her confession to her attorney to the slaying last Friday in Phoenix of Mrs. Agnes Anne Leroi and Miss Hedvig Samuelson, described her plea of self-defense as "inconceivable."

"If her story of being wounded in the hand on the night of the slayings should be true," said Deputy County Attorney G. A. Rodgers, "that fact absolutely would preclude her having disposed of the bodies without the aid of an accomplice.

"It is, however, inconceivable. Evidence tends to show that if she has a wound in her hand, it was self-inflicted or is other than a gunshot wound.

"We have witnesses who saw her, sometimes with one hand bandaged, sometimes the other, and some witnesses who saw her the morning after the slayings with neither hand bandaged."

MINISTER FATHER PREPARING TO GO TO MRS. JUDD'S HELP

In this picturesque phraseology, the Rev. Harvey J. McKinnell, superannuated minister of the Free Methodist church, commented tonight on the news that his daughter, Winnie Ruth Judd, had surrendered in Los Angeles on a charge that she murdered two women and packed their dismembered bodies in trunks.

"This marks the close of an awful week of our dear child's time of being a fugitive from justice," he added. "It is the beginning of a new day when once again the law becomes her friend instead of her enemy. I shall go to California as soon as I can make the necessary financial arrangements. If I have to I will gladly live in a log hut, just so I can be with her in her time of great trouble."

Friends of the old minister were reported to be collecting a fund to send him and his wife to Los Angeles at once.

GOLD COAST CLUB IS OPEN DESPITE CAPTAIN'S RAID

All a Mistake, the Manager Says.

Revelry was resumed last night at the Continental Gold Coast club, 19 East Cedar street, notwithstanding a statement of Capt. Gregory Moran that no successor of Dave [Cock-Eyed Mulligan] Ablin could conduct a night club in the Chicago avenue police district as long as he, Capt. Moran, was commander.

Following a raid on the resort at 1 a. m. yesterday Capt. Moran was quoted as avowing that the place would remain shut if he had to detail a squad permanently at the front entrance. The new proprietor, Ben Marden, having foiled the raiders by concealing his roulette wheels and bottled goods before their arrival, Capt. Moran declared the situation demanded something drastic.

Captain Cites Violations.

"They gotta get out," the captain proclaimed. "They're violating the fire ordinance, for one thing. And they haven't got a restaurant permit, for another thing. I'll put a squad at the door if they don't quit."

But Mine Host Marden was unperturbed.

"The raid was a faux pas," averred Monsieur Marden. "It will all be straightened out and we'll be open again this evening."

M. Marden was true to his word. The club was purveying pleasure as usual last night, except for the restraint imposed by the patrolman on the beat, who was under instructions to inspect the premises hourly and arrest any members who emerged intoxicated.

Looks Into the Zoning.

"I made one mistake," Capt. Moran confessed. "I assumed the building was zoned for residential purposes. I paid a visit to the city hall and learned it is zoned for commercial use. I can't get them for a violation there."

Police under Capt. Moran took indirect action last night to close the club by serving summonses on Charles Bowman, an official, ordering him into the Municipal court on Nov. 9 on charges of operating without a food license and without an entertainment license. Similar and additional papers will be served nightly until the right of the club to run is determined, Sergt. James J. Dwyer warned.

"I understand the Chicago Title and Trust company is interested in the case," the captain said. "I'm told that the company leased the place to Marden. A lawyer named Kaplan has been looking up the law."

The legal department of the title and trust company said they had no attorney named Kaplan. The zoning board said the premises at 19 East Cedar street were zoned for residential use exclusively.

Woman and Maid Injured in $10,000 Glencoe Fire

Damage of $10,000 was done yesterday by fire which gutted the twelve room home of Mrs. Andrew Allen, in Hohfelder road, Glencoe, early yesterday. Mrs. Allen was helped to safety by her colored maid, Sally Miller. Both were scorched by flames, and suffered from the effects of inhaling smoke. Valuable rugs, paintings, and furniture were destroyed.

DISMISS DEADLOCKED FOSHAY JURY; A NEW TRIAL JANUARY 11

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—The federal court jury trying Wilbur B. Foshay and six associates on charges of using the mails to defraud was discharged by Judge Joseph W. Molyneau late today, after it had failed during a week's deliberation to reach a verdict. A new trial was ordered to begin Jan. 11.

Trial of Foshay and his associates began in United States District court Sept. 1, under a federal grand jury indictment which charged that they used the mails to defraud in interesting persons in the various Foshay companies, a twenty million dollar enterprise which went bankrupt late in 1929. One woman juror who deadlocked the jury favored acquittal.

M'ERLANE HIDING IN LOS ANGELES, OFFICIAL SAYS

Los Angeles, Oct. 23.—(AP)—Frank McErlane, Chicago's "toughest" gangster, is hiding in Los Angeles, District Attorney Buron Fitts said tonight, and is being sought by his investigators. McErlane is wanted in Chicago in connection with the murder of Marion Miller, his common law wife, who was shot to death in an automobile two weeks ago.

Fitts, who had just returned from Chicago, where he discussed the gangster situation with State's Attorney Swanson, said "gangsters are coming here and there doesn't seem to be any way to stop them."

Sentence of Witness in Slot Machine Case Upheld

A sentence of six months in jail imposed upon David C. Rockola, a witness whose refusal to testify caused the collapse of the $1,000,000 slot machine conspiracy case, was upheld by the state Supreme court yesterday.

TWO MOTORISTS DIE WHEN CARS CRASH ON BRIDGE

Two men were killed late last night when their automobile sideswiped the steel support of the California avenue bridge over 34th street, veered over into the lane of traffic going in the opposite direction, and crashed head-on into another car.

The men killed were William Green, 29 years old, 711 West 21st street, a glazier, and John Conrad, 20, of 4341 Archer avenue, a clerk. William Paczkowski, 22, 4253 Archer avenue, driver of the second machine, was injured and taken to the Southwest General hospital. His condition is not serious.

In another accident Julius Jackson, 34 years old, 1443 Winnemac avenue, was fatally injured when his light delivery truck was struck by a north bound Clark street car at Leland avenue. He died at the Ravenswood hospital.

Robert L. Guy, 41 years old, of Batavia, was crushed to death yesterday at a gravel pit near Geneva when his heavy motor truck pinned him against another machine.

Four persons were injured, two seriously, last night when their automobile was hit by a Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific passenger train near Grays lake. Those injured are John and Frank Mikos, brothers, 5942 Slocum street, and Mr. and Mrs. John Gozlek, 2532 Colvin street. They were taken to the Condell Memorial hospital, Libertyville. Frank Mikos and John Gozlek were the less seriously injured.

Three members of a detective bureau squad were injured last night when their car skidded and overturned in the outer drive at 49th street. They are Squad Commander Edward Harder and Detectives George Kush and Gerald Guinane. All were treated at the Illinois Central hospital.

NEW GAS FOUND LESS POISONOUS, UP TO STANDARD

Chicago's new gas mixture is less poisonous than the straight artificial gas, city officials stated yesterday.

"The natural gas blend contains less carbon monoxide than artificial gas alone," said Jeffrey O'Connor, commissioner of public service, "and therefore, is less toxic. The gas has a marked odor so leaks should be promptly found."

While tests of the gas have not been completed by the health department, Dr. F. O. Tonney, director of the research laboratories, confirmed the statement that it was less toxic than the old gas. Tests made in the public service department show, Mr. O'Connor said, that the heating value of the blended gas is up to requirements.

"I have instructions from Mayor Cermak," Commissioner O'Connor said, "to give immediate attention to complaints from consumers. I am now working out a plan with officials of the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company under which all complaints will be rectified. The gas company is cooperating to correct any trouble.

"If the pilot lights go out, or the flame is too high the gas range needs adjustment. I have received complaints that the fire burns pots and pans, but the heat is not sufficient to do that. With the flame too high, the pans are blackened, but will wash easily."

FIND GASOLINE SPREAD BLAZE IN WILMETTE BLAST

An investigation by the state fire marshal disclosed yesterday that gasoline fed the flames Monday night which ignited explosives in the home of Nunzio Russo at 725 Sheridan road, Wilmette, razing the 14 room structure. Deputy Fire Marshal George T. Scrivner said that two blasts of nitroglycerin had been caused by fire from gasoline soaked rugs and furnishings.

Russo, a wealthy Italian importer and merchant, was questioned yesterday, but he told Chief Fire Marshal P. E. Bertram that he knew of no enemies and had never received Black Hand letters. The building was insured for $49,000 and the contents were insured for $10,000.

CYPRUS REVOLT ENDS AS BRITISH DROP OUT OF SKY

Planes and Ships Bring Troops to Isle.

NICOSIA, Cyprus, Oct. 23.—The entire island was calm tonight and the revolt appeared to have been quelled as a result of the arrival of British troops from Egypt.

Planes and Ships Bring Troops.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—(AP)—The island of Cyprus' revolutionary movement toward unification with Greece was understood tonight to have subsided in the face of the arrival of British troops by air and by sea.

The colonial office announced that the situation was "smoothing over generally, though still unsettled." This was on the basis of cablegrams from Gov. Ronald Storrs, who attributed the uprising to "certain political leaders who have been endeavoring to break down the government's efforts for understanding and cooperation among all people."

Seven airplanes of the royal air force carrying 150 soldiers arrived at Nicosia, the capital, early in the day from Egypt and four British fighting units landed reinforcements at Larnaca, Limassol, Paphos, and Famagusta. The planes flew the 500 miles from Alexandria in 7½ hours.

Troops Patrol Cities.

Cooperating with Cypriote authorities, the troops were deployed in vigilant patrols through these principal cities and the effect of their presence was to ease the tension and discourage rebellious elements from resuming activities. It was decided that further reinforcements would be unnecessary for the present.

Riots, which had burned the governor's house at Nicosia and held full sway in the streets for several days, recurred again last night, but were quelled when police threatened to fire on them from behind barbed wire entanglements. It was estimated that only a handful had died from the disturbances and that hardly 15,000 of the 350,000 people on the island had participated.

Foreign Minister Michalacopoulos of Greece said in a dispatch from Athens that the movement in the British crown colony could not harm the relations between his country and Great Britain.

"The Hellenic government never encouraged the manifestations of which you speak," he said, "and nothing can induce the Hellenic government to depart from the line of conduct which it has always held."

Auto Tires Life Preservers.

JERUSALEM, Oct. 23.—(AP)—As a precaution against a possible crash in the sea, each of the 150 British soldiers who were flown from Alexandria to Cyprus today were equipped with an inflated automobile tire to be used as a life preserver. One of the planes came down in Syria but took off again at once. An Imperial Airways seaplane acted as a convoy and is ready in case of emergency.

14 Men Die as Two Fishing Smacks Go Down in Storm

FUNCHAL, Madeira, Oct. 23.—(AP)—Two fishing smacks were lost with fourteen men in a heavy storm last night. Considerable damage was done ashore by high winds and heavy rains which swept the island for 24 hours.

SUED FOR DIVORCE

PAULINE LORD.

Reno, Nev., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Pauline Lord, noted actress and star of many stage productions, including "Strange Interlude," was sued for divorce here today by Owen B. Winters, nationally known advertising man.

Winters' complaint charged that cruelty on the part of his actress wife had seriously injured his health and destroyed their happiness. They married at Elkton, Md., on April 27, 1929. The complaint said there were no children and that the couple had no community property.

EARL OF DURHAM TO CLOSE CASTLE; TAXES TOO HIGH

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 23.—Still another of England's ancestral homes is falling under the heavy taxation burdens. The earl of Durham is closing the family residence, Lambton castle, in Durham, on the grounds that he cannot afford to continue to use the castle as a home because of the heavy taxes.

The castle will be shut down and most of the valuable furniture and pictures sold. Only the heirlooms will be kept. Apart from taxation, the family paid heavy death duties recently on two occasions, when the late earl, who succeeded his twin brother, died not long after his succession. Upon the death of his sister the present earl put up for sale the famous Lawrence painting, "The Red Boy," which still remains unsold in London.

CHINA SENTENCES RED PLOTTER TO DEATH; WIFE LIFE

Huge Communist Intrigue in Far East Bared.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, Oct. 23.—China today sentenced a man giving his name as H. Noulens to death for his part in an alleged gigantic communist plot to throw not only China, including its armies, into anarchy, but in fact Japan, the Philippines, Formosa, Indo-China, and the Dutch East Indies as well. His alleged wife, Mrs. Van der Cruyssen, was sentenced to life imprisonment.

H. NOULENS.

The sentences were ordered by a criminal court in Nanking after a secret trial. The couple were arrested July 15 by the municipal police in Shanghai and turned over to the Chinese military by the authorities of the international settlement.

According to authorities, Noulens, an agent of the third internationale, and his companion possessed forged Canadian and Belgian passports at the time of their arrests.

Further Arrests Expected.

Documents seized in a raid on Noulens' quarters in Shanghai exposed evidence of a plot "far greater than any plot of the Moscow government previously revealed and demonstrates that the soviet is still identical with the third internationale," according to Chinese authorities. Further arrests not only in China but elsewhere in the far east are expected.

Already representatives of foreign powers, having concessions or troops in China, are investigating information that Noulens and his band of Red operatives attempted to incite general unrest. Persons of several nationalities were mentioned in the seized documents and their arrests have been ordered.

One of the papers seized revealed that the Red organization in China aimed "to bring about the disintegration and political surrender of the Koumintang army." This discovery caused Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, president of China, to abandon his leadership in the Yangtze flood relief campaign and return as active head of his troops in Kiangsi province.

Other Countries Warned.

In order to scotch further attempts by communists to incite trouble in the far east, copies of the seized documents have been sent to the governments of the Philippines, Japan and other countries.

According to the revelations, Noulens had placed Red agitators not only in the ranks of the armies of the Nanking government, but in the arsenals as well. Documents, authorities insist, show that Noulens and his wife directly financed at least a half dozen civil wars extending from Canton to far off Kansu.

Chinese authorities claim that the arrest of this communist agent revealed that plans have been carried out for the organization along communist lines of labor and peasant organizations in Hunan, Fukien, Henan, and Hupeh provinces.

British Detective Finds Papers.

The documents revealing the plot were found by a British detective at No. 49 Nanking road. This was also the address of the Pan-Pacific Trade union secretariat and the oriental bureau of the third internationale. The arrested couple, it was discovered, had operated in China under twelve aliases.

Police also found records of five residential addresses of Noulens and his wife in Shanghai, four different telegraph addresses, eight postoffice boxes, and $47,500 in Chinese currency deposited in seven banks in addition to large sums of foreign currency in each.

The raid resulted in the seizure of 211 documents and 1,081 papers and books. The documents were in the English, German, Russian, Japanese and Chinese languages. Seventy-three dealt chiefly with Red revolutionary activities in China, eighteen in Corea, fourteen in Indo-China, ten in the Straits Settlements, one in Formosa and one in India. The seized papers indicate that the expenditures of the Shanghai branch of the communists alone amounted to about $130,000 Mexican per month.

HENS NOW TO TELL WHEN THEY'VE LAID EGG, INVENTOR SAYS

Oakland, Cal., Oct. 23.—(AP)—A contraption on display at an inventors' congress here will, if its designers are correct, cause a hen to tell whether she has laid an egg.

It is a trap nest with a double exit. If she enters and does not lay an egg the hen must go out through the exit leading to a pen set aside for nonlayers.

If the egg is forthcoming the second exit opens and allows her to depart to a pen for the laying hens.

JAPANESE DEFY LEAGUE; REFUSE TO QUIT CHINA

Demand Recognition of Treaty Rights.

BY EGBERT SWENSON.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENEVA, Oct. 23.—Japan tonight defied the league of nations when she rejected the league council's resolution submitted yesterday demanding evacuation of the Japanese troops from outside the Japanese zone in Manchuria by Nov. 16. Kenkichi Yoshizawa, Japanese representative, declared his government could not accept that date or any other fixed time for the withdrawal of its soldiers.

Yoshizawa emphasized that before agreeing to evacuation his government requires a "preliminary accord with China regarding the fundamental principles which govern the normal relations between the two countries. The league resolution asked that evacuation be effected before China and Japan entered into direct negotiations.

Briand Admits Impasse.

Aristide Briand, French foreign minister and chairman of the league council, recognized the difficulties of the problem confronting the council when in a speech he admitted that if Japan wants more from China than a simple guarantee of security for Japanese lives and property before evacuating Manchuria the league is up against an impasse. Briand admitted that the league is "frail."

The Japanese representative avoided being more explicit than to say that his government wants a reaffirmation by China of her treaty obligations. China's determination to protect the lives and property of Japanese nationals means nothing because she will not back it up, the Japanese delegates have been saying for the last week. But a reaffirmation of treaties in general, including that of 1915, which the Chinese never ratified and always have protested, apparently is of precious importance. The treaty of 1915 involves, among other things, mining and railway concessions.

Continue Debate Today.

Tonight's debate was adjourned until 10:30 a. m. tomorrow, when it is expected that the council will vote down Japan's amendment, 13 to 1. Then, after more debate, it will pass the council's resolution demanding evacuation by Nov. 16, also by a vote of 13 to 1. Japan's negative vote will veto the resolution under the rules of article XI.

As to whether the Chinese will demand action under article XV. of the league covenant, which authorizes the council to take any action it considers necessary and which does not require a unanimous vote, they refused to commit themselves tonight. All Dr. Sze, Chinese delegate, would say was:

"If the Japanese do not yield, you will see what we will do."

China Is Disappointed.

In an ironical discourse accepting the league's resolution, Dr. Sze expressed deep disappointment with the postponement of the evacuation for another three weeks. He bitterly criticized the league's functioning.

"If the efforts of the league, backed by American coöperation, fail after five weeks to liberate the territory of one member from the invading troops of another," he declared, "it means that there exists a flaw hitherto unsuspected in the machinery for peace or a lack of determination on the part of civilized nations to make this machinery function efficaciously."

Japan to Ask Amendment.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Oct. 24 [Saturday].—It is understood here that Japan will ask the league of nations council to amend its resolution so as to fix no definite date for the withdrawal of troops from Manchuria, but to retain the other points. Japan is ready to pledge herself to open direct negotiations with China as soon as the Nanking government has publicly announced before the league that it will respect Japanese treaty rights and suppress anti-Japanese movements.

Japan has no objection to the league reconvening Nov. 16 or of informing the league of the progress of troop withdrawal from time to time.

The belief is growing that Great Britain is seeking to embarrass Japan at Geneva. Sir Francis Lindley, British ambassador to Tokio, has informed Foreign Minister Shidehara that Britain is determined to take a strong stand as a result of the recent bombing by Japanese planes of the city of Chinchow.

DAUGHTER WINS $20,000 VERDICT AGAINST FATHER

Mrs. Ruth Landon Kelly, 24 years old, of Detroit, was awarded $20,000 damages yesterday by a jury in the court of Circuit Judge Martin H. Finneran on a charge that she had been assaulted by her father, James Landon, 5410 West 63d street. Landon is president of a coal and building material company.

Mrs. Kelly charged that her father attacked her several times while she was living in his home in February, 1929. She was married the following December.

Landon and his son, the plaintiff's brother, denied her charges. The defense charged that Mrs. Kelly was mentally unbalanced by grief over her mother, who died three months before the alleged attacks, and that she later became incensed because she failed to receive a share of the $50,000 estate left by Mrs. Landon.

PLANS TO REFILL EMPTY COUNTY COFFERS READY

They'll Be Given to Public Thursday.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—The governor's revenue commission will make public next Thursday afternoon, in Chicago, its recommendations for the relief of the bankrupt taxing bodies of Cook county.

This was announced here today after members of the commission had held a six hour conference with Gov. Emmerson.

The report of the executive committee of the commission will be submitted to the full commission Thursday at the Stevens hotel and at the same time will be made public.

Gov. Emmerson stated after today's conference that if the report is satisfactory, he will immediately issue a call for a special session of the general assembly to take up the bills recommended by the commission.

Governor Wants Speed.

"Are you in accord with the views of the executive committee as they expressed them to you today?" the governor was asked.

"Yes, I may say that in general I find them satisfactory," he replied and in somewhat stern tone he added: "Something must be done, and quickly."

The members of the conference appointed S. E. Thomason, publisher of the Chicago Daily Illustrated Times, as their spokesman when newspaper men were received.

"In the first place," said Mr. Thomason, "we all feel that our report should be made public before the full committee. Accordingly, we will disclose what methods of financing we have recommended and how we propose to meet the various problems of the local government agencies at the Thursday meeting, which shall be a public session."

Refuses to Discuss Rumors.

Mr. Thomason would not discuss the many rumors as to the means by which the committee expects to raise the funds necessary for meeting the long overdue pay rolls of the Chicago school board and other public agencies. These reports have it that revenue will be raised by a state income tax, by luxury taxes, and by an additional gasoline tax. One interviewer, directing his question at Gov. Emmerson, asked if there would be a recommendation for additional bond issues without referendum, but he was put off with the response that this will be disclosed when the report is issued.

Mr. Thomason stated that a final meeting of the executive committee would be held Tuesday night at which the final draft of the report would be adopted. The report will then be printed and made ready for presentation Thursday.

The governor refused to state when he will convene the legislature. Told that the reports were he wanted the assembly in session on Nov. 2, he said they were without foundation; that he did not know when he will summon the legislators.

"I will announce the call when I receive the report," he said.

Grateful to Commission.

The governor expressed his appreciation of the earnestness with which the members of the executive committee have labored during the last four months.

"I think few people realize the enormity of their task," he said. "They have performed a real service for the community."

The members of the commission who conferred with the governor, in addition to Mr. Thomason, were Joseph K. Brittain, chairman; Earl C. Smith, president of the Illinois Agricultural association; William H. Sexton, corporation counsel of Chicago, representing Fred Sargent, who is ill, and former Judge George A. Cooke, representing Samuel Insull, who has been absent in the east.

Expert consultants of the committee who also participated in the conference included Douglas Sutherland, Harris Keeler, John Watson and Howard P. Jones.

Gov. Emmerson said that when he issues the call for the special session he would include in the call various "minor matters" in which remedial legislation is needed.

REALTY BOARD PROTESTS.

The Chicago real estate board, through its president, Mark Levy, telegraphed Gov. Emmerson yesterday they are dissatisfied with the emergency relief program of his revenue commission and intimated they will fight it. The wire refers to it as inadequate and intimates that it will cause a "catastrophe" in local taxes.

"All advice to the contrary," reads the telegram, "we have been unable to find adequate relief in the plan verbally outlined to our committee by Mr. Harris S. Keeler for the first time Wednesday.

"His plan is at great variance in its final results for the benefit of the taxpayer, with the plan sponsored by the Chicago real estate board and the executive committee (of the governor's conference) have been so advised in detail.

"We call this matter to your attention because of the danger of the repetition of the catastrophe brought about by the previous emergency enactment of the Strawn committee recommendations, which have never produced the relief they were presumed to create."

Cure Finance Ills of State by Remapping, Malone Plea

WM. H. MALONE.

Reapportionment of the legislature must be accomplished before Illinois and Chicago can hope to win their way out of the financial troubles, William H. Malone, former chairman of the state tax commission and candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, told delegates to the Illinois Municipal league convention at Waukegan yesterday.

Mayor James H. Andrew of Kewanee, an advocate of home rule for municipalities, was elected president of the league, succeeding John Coleman.

"In Illinois, for the last twenty years, the governor and members of our state legislative bodies have taken the oath to support the constitution with their fingers crossed," said Mr. Malone. "Nothing could be more hypocritical than to see law makers passing laws and providing heavy penalties to insure their enforcement and at the same time flouting the basic law of our state.

Cites Votes in Districts.

In support of his contention for the need of reapportionment, Malone said that the 1st, 2d, 3d, 15th, 17th, 27th, and 29th senatorial districts in Chicago had a combined vote in the last general election of 153,093. The 25th district alone had 149,601 votes. Thus, approximately the same number of persons in the first named districts were represented by eight senators and twenty-four representatives in the general assembly, while the 25th district had only one senator and three representatives.

The speaker pointed out that this meant that some voters had eight times the voting strength that others possess in the law making body.

Malone also attacked wastefulness of the tax spending bodies.

"The various municipalities of Illinois must recognize that the days of squandering public funds are over, and I believe that the members of this league will agree with me in the demand that we must cooperate to relieve the taxpayers of a burden, rather than to relieve them of more money."

Calls This the Crisis.

During the next four years, Malone said, Illinois will pass through its most serious period since the civil war.

"Instead of paying off our debts during days of prosperity," he declared, "we went further into debt, and now in days of adversity, we are expected to pay off our obligations. Such an anomalous condition cannot be maintained.

The league adopted resolutions concerning legislation which it will sponsor at the next session of the legislature. It advocated a special tax for the operation of sewage treatment plants in cities which are not part of any sanitary district and another special tax to provide for the retirement of obligations caused by the issuance of tax anticipation warrants.

BOY SHOT ACCIDENTALLY.

Charles Luther, 15 years old, 1218 Wellington avenue, was examining an automatic pistol belonging to his chum, Walter Holderness, 15 years old, on a visit to the latter's home, 2700 Mildred avenue, last evening when he accidentally discharged the weapon, wounding himself in the right hand.

LAWYER LOSES CONTEMPT CASE IN HIGH COURT

Attorney Samuel J. Andalman yesterday lost his appeal to the Illinois Supreme court on the sentence of 120 days in jail meted out by Superior Judge McKinley in February, 1930, for contempt of court. The high court held that Andalman actually was in contempt, but it recommended that Judge McKinley fine Andalman rather than enforce the imprisonment.

The citation against the lawyer came after he filed an intervening petition on behalf of Mrs. Michael J. Healy, who sought to reconfine her husband in the county jail for failure to meet alimony arrears. Healy was released on a writ of habeas corpus and Judge McKinley held that Attorney Andalman had not the right to intervene. Nevertheless the lawyer filed the petition and promptly was sentenced for contempt of court. The Appellate court also upheld Judge McKinley's sentence.

PAY CONFERENCE WITH BANKERS GIVES CITY HOPE

But Objection Is Raised on Tax Paper Sale.

Well, president of the union, "it will be only a drop in the bucket. We can't begin to satisfy our creditors with that amount.

Harm May Be Done.

"As a matter of fact, it may cause harm in one respect. As soon as we're paid that much, all our creditors who have been patient until now will expect immediate payment. If they aren't paid, they will be dissatisfied. It is important we don't lose the present good will the public feels toward us.

"What we must work for is permanent relief, so that the board of education cannot repeat this action again. So long as it is possible for this situation to arise again, we are in danger. As for immediate relief, it will not be solved, either, by this $7,000,000."

Several teachers in open discussion arose and asked if it would be a violation of restrictions laid down in the Otis tenure of office law, which governs the granting of teachers' pensions, if the teachers put aside a week in which they refused to teach if pay were not forthcoming.

Talk Refusal to Teach.

"I know it would be impossible to get the entire body of teachers to do it unanimously," one teacher said. "But if it were possible couldn't all the teachers take their places at their desks on a certain date, but refuse to teach?"

A lawyer engaged by the federation suggested that, whereas he did not advise a strike, he thought that all the teachers on a certain date, providing pay had not been provided, might find it necessary to go out and try to borrow street car fare to get to school. He doubted that a day or two of school suspension would jeopardize the teachers' standing with regard to the pension law. No action was taken regarding the matter.

Discuss Relief Bills.

Other questions concerned the tax revision bills proposed by the board of education to Gov. Emmerson's revenue commission.

"Under the provisions of the bills would it be possible for the board of education to spend $50,000,000 on building in one year?" one teacher asked.

A report of activities of leaders among the varied teaching organizations in the Austin High school, representing the teaching body, it was said, was given by Miss Cordelia Brown, a teacher there.

"We have gone to some of the clubs and individual business men in the community," she said, "and put the matter up to them. For several months, we've said to them, we've taken care of their children gratis. Now, we ask them, what are they going to do?

Put Up to Bankers.

"We also intend to go to the bankers and ask them if a teacher working several months without pay isn't good enough security without collateral to obtain a loan? Thirdly, we're going to ask them if they won't give us help and backing in obtaining permanent relief."

"But isn't that shifting the burden from the board of education, which should shoulder it, to the business men, who are not to blame for the situation?" one teacher asked. "I think we're in debt too much now—we're up to our ears in it. And so long as business men help us carry the burden the board of education won't do anything."

GIRL TESTIFIES AT HER FATHER'S TRIAL AS SLAYER

Rose Calabrese, 18 years old, took the witness stand in Judge Rudolph Desort's court yesterday in the trial of her father, Thomas, for the murder of a neighbor, James J. Hill. The girl, whose story that Hill attacked her is said to have prompted the slaying, was a state's witness.

Missing since Thursday, Rose was found yesterday in her home at 5424 West Congress street and taken to court. She was placed on the stand by Assistant State's Attorney George Lavin. Rose said that after her mother told her father of the attack, her father loaded his gun and sat on the front porch. A few minutes later the shooting began, she said.

"I heard a gun fired four or five times," the girl testified. "All I could see was that there was some commotion in the street."

Seven character witnesses were then placed on the stand by Attorney Miles J. Devine, who employs Calabrese as an investigator. The witnesses testified to the defendant's integrity.

SCIENCE FINDS NEW BENEFITS in Kellogg's All-Bran

IRON to help make red blood. VITAMIN B to tone the intestinal tract in addition to its valuable "bulk" which promotes elimination in a gentle, natural way

MILLIONS AND MILLIONS of people have found Kellogg's ALL-BRAN a safe and pleasant way to overcome common constipation. For ten years, in ever-increasing numbers, they have been helped by this famous ready-to-eat cereal. Thousands of physicians have prescribed it.

These benefits come in a gentle, natural way. The "bulk" or fiber in Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is much like the fiber in lettuce and other leafy vegetables—only it is concentrated in a more convenient form to relieve constipation.

Inside the body, Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is altogether different from when you see it in the package. It absorbs a great amount of moisture and becomes a soft mass which gently carries out the waste in the intestines.

Newly discovered scientific data shows that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN also adds valuable elements to the diet. Nature has put into it two things that everybody needs. (1) Iron to help build red blood. (2) Vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract, assist in keeping it healthy and promote regular elimination. The amount of iron in Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is twice as great as the iron in an equal amount by weight of beef liver. No wonder Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is considered far safer and better than doses of pills and drugs which whip up the intestines and often lead to dangerous habits.

Two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN daily are usually enough to prevent and relieve both temporary and recurring constipation. If you suffer from intestinal trouble not relieved in this way, see your doctor and have him prescribe the treatment.

Start today to overcome your constipation and avoid more serious trouble by eating Kellogg's ALL-BRAN regularly as a cereal or in cooking. It makes delicious fluffy bran muffins, breads, etc. (Full directions are on every package.)

Just one word of caution—be sure you get Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Then you know you are getting bran in the form that will do you the most good . . . the bran that gives you bulk, iron and Vitamin B.

Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Jarecki Enters Judgment on a Downtown Property

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Browning, King & Co., clothiers, paid $88,888 yesterday to the county treasurer on their 1929 realty taxes. Technically the payment was on account, but actually it was the total of the company's taxes, except about $6,500, which the board of assessors will certify to County Judge Jarecki this morning as an error.

This payment of $88,888, which was made through Attorney Paul Hassell, raises the total recent payments of delinquent taxes to $562,501. These payments have been made by large property owners who have protested their taxes in court. It has been held that owners of valuable real estate, especially income producing property, should pay the part of their tax bill they deem fair and then contest the remainder in court, instead of withholding the entire levy.

Store Company Pays Tax.

A number of wealthy property owners have made such payments. The county treasurer's records show that Montgomery Ward Brothers paid $321,930 of the company's total bill of $337,490 before taxes became delinquent on May 15. The unpaid remainder of $15,560 of Montgomery Ward Brothers' taxes is due to the company's contention that the board of review made an error in the assessment on its Wabash avenue building. All taxes for 1929 on the State street building have been paid in full.

Judge Jarecki yesterday ordered judgment entered against the Ridgemont Real Estate company and in favor of the county collector for $197,-[illegible] It was asserted by the company's attorney that this company owes $89,861 on its 1928 taxes and $89,161 on its 1929 taxes. To these sums interest is added.

Jarecki Enters Judgment.

When Assistant State's Attorney James Clancy urged upon the court disposition of the case involving $9,-[illegible] in 1929 taxes on the Lawyers' building, 140 North La Salle street, no one appeared for the owner. Judge Jarecki gave judgment to the county collector for the balance alleged to be due on the 1929 taxes.

The county treasurer's office shows that Suzanne F. High is owner of the land in the property, and that John P. Wilson is her attorney. The property is valued at $1,067,661 for taxing purposes.

A score of tax cases were continued yesterday. Altogether, the state's attorney asserted that more than $1,-[illegible] in 1929 taxes and $700,000 more on 1928 taxes, are owed on these properties.

Attorneys for several property owners said that they would recommend to their clients payment on account. The county treasurer, therefore expects several hundred thousand dollars in the next few days.

County Refuses Check.

A check for $25,619 as a part payment on the $138,000 taxes and penalties for the Aquitania apartment building, 820 Argyle street, was given yesterday by Attorney U. S. Schwartz to Morris Strauss, trustee for the building. Mr. Schwartz's action was aimed at preventing the appointment of a receiver to collect the taxes.

"The county board has refused to accept part payment of taxes and one penalty," said Attorney Henry M. Ashman, representing the board, "and I have declined your offer."

Superior Judge Robert Gentzel, before whom the receivership action is pending, returned to the owners of the property as "tax dodgers" because of their alleged failure to pay their share of the taxes for the years 1924 to 1927, inclusive.

The judge said he would name the receiver this morning, but would refuse the receivership if the county board would accept the check.

MOVIE DISPUTE ENDS; UNION MEN GO BACK TO JOBS

Operators Take a 20% Cut in Pay.

Union motion picture operators went back to work in about 100 small theaters yesterday, ending a two months' lockout featured by fifteen bombings and other acts of terrorism as the result of the importation of New York operators to man the theaters involved.

A wage agreement to run until Jan. 11, 1933, was signed by representatives of the Allied Theater Owners of Illinois and the operators' union in State's Attorney Swanson's county building office late yesterday, peace was declared, and the combatants shook hands. Later, with the state's attorney and Mayor Cermak, they went to a studio on South Wabash avenue where a movie reel was made of the signing ceremonies and both Mr. Cermak and Mr. Swanson spoke briefly, expressing gratification that the trouble was at an end.

20 Per Cent Salary Cut.

Under the new agreement the operators take a 20 per cent salary cut, except those who work in very small houses, where it was agreed that high expenses and small revenue made more drastic relief necessary.

In these theaters the number of operators was cut from two to one, with the stipulation that the owner might serve as the second man in the booth provided he is licensed by the city to run the machines. Where one union man is employed his wages are increased 15 per cent in recognition of the added burden. The union wage scale is from $90 to $175 per week. It was calculated that the removal of one operator would reduce the operating expense 42½ per cent.

Cut in Larger Houses.

Earlier in the day Jack Miller, business representative of the Exhibitors' association, signed an agreement with the union whereby the larger movie house operators agreed to a 20 per cent reduction in salaries. This agreement also expires Jan. 11, 1933, the World's Fair year. It is hoped that the importance of that season will produce amity when a new agreement is in negotiation.

Conferees for the union at the meeting in Mr. Swanson's office were Thomas D. Nash, attorney; Thomas J. Reynolds, president; Thomas E. Maloy, business agent, and Ralph O'Hara, steward. The owners were represented by their president, Aaron Saperstein, and by their attorney, Theodore Levin. Assistant State's Attorney Charles E. Lounsbury assisted his chief in presiding over the meeting. The union operators went back to work with the first matinee, and most of the New York imports were sent back there during the day. The rest will go today.

EMBEZZLER WOLF IS NOW CONVICT 5,605 IN PRISON AT JOLIET

Walter Wolf, who stole $3,666,000 from the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company while a trusted employé, became Convict No. 5605 at the old Joliet penitentiary yesterday. The former manager of the bank's coupon department has started his sentence of 10 to 100 years for the embezzlement.

After Wolf's number was registered in the books, he went through the preliminary routine at the prison. He was given a close hair cut, a bath, and the convict's gray suit and cap. It will be a month before Wolf will have prison work to do, according to E. M. Stubbelfield, assistant warden. For the time being Wolf is occupying a detention cell. The tier of detention cells are called the "fish gallery" by the convicts. In their lingo, Wolf, a new convict, is a "fish."

PASSERBY SAVES BABY IN FALL FROM WINDOW

Police last night were looking for a gray haired man, about 60 years old, whose name is Riley. They want to compliment him as a hero.

Riley was passing 1557 West Garfield boulevard last evening when he heard a startled cry. Hanging on the sill of a second story window, 25 feet above, he saw David Daniels, 21 months old. The child had broken through the window screen, and was about to drop to the sidewalk below.

Riley stood below the window, arms outstretched. In another moment the screaming infant slid off the sill. He fell into Riley's outstretched arms, then dropped to the sidewalk because of the force of his fall, which, however, had been broken.

Dr. Allen E. Parsons, 2937 East 79th street, took David to the Jackson Park hospital, where it was found he had suffered a possible skull fracture. Later the child was taken home. He will recover. Meanwhile the hero had disappeared, merely giving his name as "Riley."

NET REVENUE OF PANAMA CANAL IS PUT AT $15,409,991

BALBOA, Canal Zone, Oct. 23.—(AP)—The Panama canal cleared net revenues of $15,409,991 during the fiscal year 1931, and showed a surplus of $7,060,494 after fixed capital charges of $8,349,497 were deducted.

These figures, compiled in the accounting department from combined canal and business operations of the Canal Zone organization, are based on total revenues amounting to $42,765,048 for the year ended June 30. This was $4,527,219.96 less than for the preceding year.

Chicago Singer Awarded $42,500 for Bus Injuries

Leavenworth, Kas., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Miss Sylvia Neugen, a Chautauqua singer from Chicago, was awarded damages of $42,500 in federal court today in her suit for $50,000 against the Topeka Chautauqua company for injuries received when one of the company's motor cars overturned near Topeka.

YOUTH WHO FLED CELL SHOT AS HE RESISTS ARREST

Louis Butman, 19 years old, alias Dusche, who escaped from a South Chicago police station cell Sept. 9, allegedly with the aid of his mother, was shot in the abdomen last night when he resisted arrest. He was taken to the Belmont hospital, where it was believed he would die.

The shooting occurred in front of 6328 Addison street, near the home of a friend, Miss Alice Lehman, 6320 Addison street, whom Butman had been visiting. He was sitting in his car when Policeman George Fisher of the Irving Park station recognized him as the escaped prisoner and seized him. The youth resisted and in the struggle the revolver was discharged, the bullet penetrating his abdomen.

Save Gas!

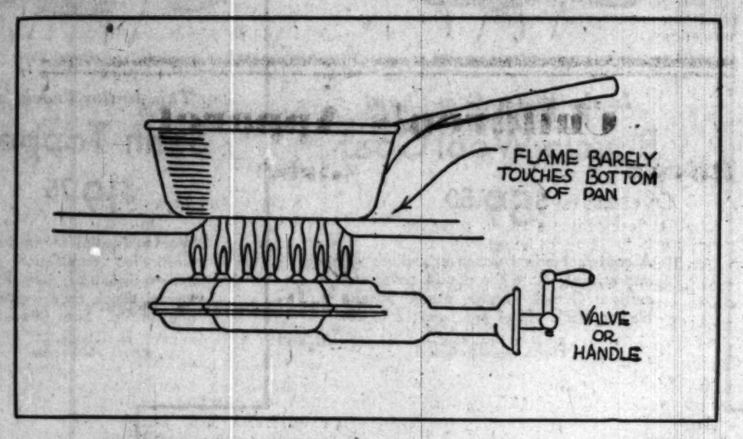
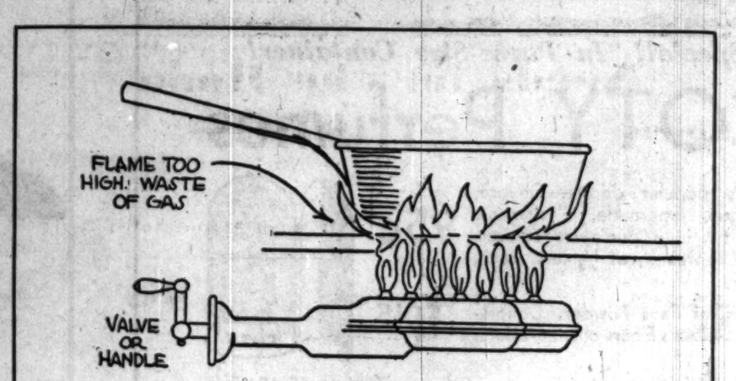
PERFECT FLAME →

If the flame on your gas range looks like this, it saves gas, cooks rapidly, keeps kettles clean, and is odorless.



WASTEFUL FLAME →

If the flame looks like this, it wastes gas and may blacken utensils.



To correct wasteful flame:

Turn down the valve (or handle) until the flame looks like the picture at top. Should your range fail to respond to this simple adjustment, ask us to send an inspector.

To get the best results from your gas range—use the correct gas flame. The flame should barely touch the bottom of the pan. Don't Try to Hurry Cooking by Turning up the Gas Too High—the flame does not get any hotter, neither does your food cook any quicker. If your gas flame sweeps up around the sides of the pan, you are burning more gas than you need. To get the best service and most economy from your gas range, study the pictures and follow the simple instructions given here.

WATER HEATERS

Sections 1903 and 1904 of the Chicago Municipal Code forbid the use of gas water heaters in bathrooms. They also provide that any gas water heater, wherever installed, must be connected with a flue pipe, to carry the products of combustion out of the building.

If your water heater does not have a flue connection, have one installed immediately or phone the gas company.

By order of Health Commissioner Herman N. Bundesen, the gas company is compelled to cut off gas service to water heaters illegally installed.

JURY REPORTED INDICTED IN QUIZ OF CLOSED BANKS

Officers, Depositor Hit by Jury.

former officers and one depositor in two closed banks.

Henry E. Ayers, who is prosecuting bank fraud cases to the grand jury, asserted he had evidence that Christensen and Larsen had diverted funds of the bank for their own speculations in the stock market.

Make Partial Restitution.

The officers had made partial restitution before the bank closed, thus partially admitting their guilt, Mr. Ayers said. The prosecutor declined to estimate the extent of the alleged embezzlements, explaining that his investigation was still uncompleted.

In the other true bill the jury is reported to have named Stewart Van Berschot, former assistant cashier of the Fullerton State bank, 3400 Armitage avenue, and his brother, Arthur Van Berschot, a depositor. The Fullerton bank was one of the Bain group.

In this case, Mr. Ayers said, the officers showed that the brothers maintained a joint account with a third brother, by means of which they defrauded $1,194.

Face One Count Charge.

A charge of operating a confidence game involving $30,000 is impending against Stewart Van Berschot, according to Mr. Ayers. A young couple, it said, had signed a complaint charging that the bank officers had fleeced them of their life savings in a Texas oil deal and had gone so far as to make an engagement with the wife to be sure of getting the money.

Investigation in four of the twelve bank banks is practically complete, Assistant State's Attorney Swanson announced. Mr. Swanson said no criminal action could be taken against the officers and directors of the Bain group until investigations of all twelve institutions were completed and coordinated. The state's attorney first acted against the Bain interests two months ago when Irvin T. Gilruth, receiver for the banks, revealed that John Bain, his sons and companies he dominated were indebted to the banks to the sum of $2,300,000.

TELLS OF CARE MRS. ERLANGER' CAVE PRODUCER

New York, Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Abraham L. Erlanger believed that Carlotta Fizel, who is trying to prove that she was his common law wife, would die when he suffered a paralytic stroke in 1928, according to Jim Riley, proprietor of Arrowhead Inn, who was the chief witness in the trial of the suit resumed today. Mr. Riley is one of some 200 well known persons who are to be called to support Miss Fizel's claim, to a dower share in the $75,000,000 estate.

The witness said he had known Erlanger since 1908, but he had not met the contestant until 1928, when Erlanger appeared with her at the Inn, in the upper Bronx. Riley said the theatrical man introduced Miss Fizel as Mrs. Erlanger.

Under the guidance of Mr. Steuer the witness testified that he heard Mr. Erlanger introduce his companion as "Mrs. Erlanger" to several of his friends.

"Mr. Erlanger often spoke to me of Flora and told me his wife had ruined his life," the witness said.

VERDICT FOR MAURICE ROTHSCHILD, SUED BY NEW YORK ACTRESS

New York, Oct. 23.—[Special.]—A sealed verdict opened today by Supreme Court Justice Louis A. Valente disclosed that the jury in the $25,000 breach of promise action brought by Vera McCord, former actress, was decided in favor of Maurice Rothschild of Chicago, the defendant. No damages were awarded to Miss McCord.

Miss McCord alleged that she was engaged to Mr. Rothschild in 1923 and that he renewed his promise of marriage in 1928. A date was set for the marriage, she said, charging that Mr. Rothschild did not appear to go through with the ceremony.

Don McCord, her brother, who was a witness for Mr. Rothschild, told of his sister's continual drinking. Mr. Rothschild, who admitted he was engaged to the actress in 1923, denied that he had promised marriage in 1928. He said he was disillusioned when he saw her disheveled and under the influence of liquor after an actors' ball in 1928. He is president of the American and Canadian Properties company.

The trial started on Monday.

VOTE TO INDICT 13 IN GASOLINE TAX CONSPIRACY

Accused of Evading $500,000 Levy.

True bills were voted by the grand jury yesterday against thirteen men on a charge of conspiracy to violate the gas tax law. Their bonds were set at $10,000 each. Louis A. Weiss, a volunteer state employe, was named as the head of the alleged gasoline bootlegging ring.

Through the operations of this ring the state has been defrauded out of a half million dollars, according to Assistant State's Attorneys John Holman, John Hampton and John O'Hara, who have been in charge of the gas tax violation cases. The prosecutors said that at least 1,500 cars of gasoline had been smuggled into Chicago between August of 1929 and June of 1930.

Fugitive Tells of Plot.

Weiss' reputed part in the scheme, it was reported, was revealed to the grand jury by Poole Harrison, a fugitive from a warrant of a year ago charging conspiracy, who was captured on Thursday.

Harrison is said to have told the grand jury that in September of 1929 he went to the gasoline tax commission offices in Chicago to pay a bill. A girl told him to get in touch with Mr. Weiss. Then Weiss, according to Harrison's testimony, said, "Don't be a chump. If you want to go along with us we can make some money."

Harrison agreed, and paid over only half of his gasoline taxes, a sum of $17,500, it was reported. The jury voted to reindict Harrison yesterday, but this was the first true bill against Weiss. The other defendants had all been indicted on separate charges before, but now their cases are linked around the alleged conspiracy, in which Weiss is accused of being the principal figure.

Eleven Others Named.

The others named in the conspiracy bill were: Ben, Maurice and William Pohn, brothers; Max Glasser, Dan Levin, Elmer Berg, and Jacob Franks, all of whom were involved in the operations of the A. & P. Oil company, the Chicago Petroleum company, the Fidelity Oil company, and the Empire Oil company [which has no connection with the Empire Oil and Refining company]; John F. Connor, associated with Harrison in the Reliable Oil company, and C. Smythe O'Mears, and his brothers, Robert and Morris.

The O'Mearas operated the Smythe Oil company, Morris Oil company, Morris Petroleum company, and the Utilities Oil Storage company.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

PROTECTIONISM IN EUROPE.

France is taking steps to reduce her imports from abroad. The method pursued is not the old fashioned one of tariffs, such as this country imposes, but a more positive embargo. Her new quotas limit the importation of coal, wine, nitrates, canned meats, condensed and dried milk, cheese and ham. It is reported that a schedule is being prepared, as well, against American fruit, which has been imported of recent years in large quantities.

The French restrictions are by no means unique. Similar protection is accorded one or another of the home industries in most of the countries of Europe. Virtually all the countries of western Europe have protected their home production of breadstuffs with quota regulations which provide that the importations of wheat must not exceed a fixed percentage of the native crop. An artificial price, well above the world price, is usually paid for the domestic production and only enough wheat is admitted to make up any deficiency in the home supply. Somewhat similar regulations with regard to moving picture films have been imposed in a great many countries. The number of films which may be imported bears a fixed relationship to the domestic output.

Now France is extending this system to other articles of international trade. So far as restricting the free movement of commodities is concerned, the quota system is plainly a good deal more hampering than our tariffs. We protect our manufacturers of chinaware, for example, with a tariff wall, but if the foreigners can produce cheaply enough to climb the wall there is no limit, except our consuming capacity, to the amount of china they may sell us. France, on the contrary, would say that Frenchmen must buy all that the French potteries can produce before a plate can be imported from Japan, Germany, England or America, no matter what the price differential may be.

The relative merits of these two systems in stimulating home industries may be debated, but it must be obvious to those who criticize our system for its interference with the free flow of trade that our offense, if it is an offense, is a relatively minor one. The continental system does much more than interfere with international trade; it prohibits it whenever prohibition seems desirable.

A curiosity of the times is the fact that continental Europeans are continually berating America for her protectionist policy while accepting their own more rigorous system as above reproach. So far as France is concerned, at least, it is no answer to say that she cannot pay her debts to this country unless she has an excess of exports. The new quotas, directed largely against America, have been set up in the year of the moratorium when there are no debts to pay and at the moment when France has withdrawn hundreds of millions of dollars in gold from America.

Europe takes offense at our tariff policy because Europe has never altered its belief that America is a kind of colony. The United States is, in European eyes, less a nation with national interests to preserve and advance than a region to be exploited in the interest of the old world. No one in Europe will feel outraged if, as a result of the present election, England goes protectionist; but a raising of our tariff wall would be regarded as the last word in selfishness. No such general increase is now contemplated, but, unless Europe exercises restraint in her restrictions on our foreign trade, reprisals from this country should cause no astonishment.

SCHEMES AND SYSTEMS.

The head of a great German industry, now visiting America, makes a pat remark when he says people sometimes ask too much of their economic system. Sometimes is especially now, when we are told daily that capitalism has broken down and democracy gone bankrupt. All that capitalism and democracy have accomplished for human progress is forgotten or ignored in these criticisms, and there is no sensible balancing of accounts. What is demanded by their impatience is some system or other which will repeal human nature and insure the individual against all his errors or weaknesses.

That present conditions need correction no one will deny, but there is no short cut to perfection. All the patent systems ignore the basic fact that they must be administered by human beings and will register their faults, their weaknesses as well as their virtues. Our forefathers who cherished liberty as the key to human progress knew this and realized that the real path forward was by way of the trial and error which instructs and restrains the individual.

Laws and regulations are essential in the present stage of human progress, but our forefathers had a wholesome and farseeing distrust of their efficacy, knowing that many we adopt cost more than they are worth. In these difficult days this should be more apparent than in easier times, for it is in countries where governments impose most upon the activities of their people that conditions are at their worst, and one of the main brakes upon our own recovery is our involvement in their predicament.

There is no system that will save us from ourselves, and the American people will deserve worse than now afflicts them if they turn back upon the path that has carried them so far.

The next session of congress will be inundated with proposals for more public expenditures, more devices for getting money by taxation, more government regulations. The country is full of doctors who want to cure us by increasing the dose that made us ill.

THE SENATE AND OUR FOREIGN POLICY.

The desertion of our outposts in the Pacific, Guam, and Samoa, is the latest step in a policy which has been progressively weakening the ability of this nation to protect its interests from aggression. It is a policy incomprehensible to the normal American mind and plants the suspicion that Mr. Hoover's long sojourn abroad during the formative period of his career prevents him from seeing our international affairs from an American standpoint. This is what is called being international minded, a condition we are all invited to share by the organized advocates of foreign entanglement and unlimited responsibility for the welfare of every country save our own.

We have already gone a long way in compromising our independence, a long way from the statesmanship which put the protection and welfare of our own nation in the foreground of its concern. Our international finance and our international politics already have begun to exact their price and we are still under the sway of a policy which is piling up the cost. There is no mandate for this policy from the nation, but only from clamorous minorities self-appointed to lead us. In this situation, apparently the nation must rely upon the senate to put a check upon our descent, to protect American independence, and to defend and advance American interests.

THE FULL TILLS OF SPORTS.

Earlier in October an article priced at four dollars was sold to some sixty-five thousand purchasers hereabouts. It was nothing the customers needed and its life was, say, two hours and a half. To use it the purchaser had to subject himself to some personal inconvenience and expose himself without cover to heavy and almost constant rainfall. The use of the article entailed not only this but some additional expenses, including the cost of restoring apparel to wearable condition. All of which only means that some sixty-five thousand people went to see Northwestern play Notre Dame at Soldiers' field Oct. 10, and, as Mr. Pegler says of what he has seen of football games in the east, the despair and poverty of a depressed nation are not evident Saturday afternoons.

The amount of money being spent to keep football flush financially does not reveal a people indifferent to attestable misfortune in their communities—the subscriptions to relief funds would disprove that—or a people spending their last few dollars to forget that they haven't any more. It indicates that for the majority of the American people life is not much off its usual stride and that potentially their possessions are not injured. It is not sham optimism to know that the dislocations are within remedy. Things out of balance are not equivalent to things destroyed, and the United States is as rich today as it was two years ago this fall.

THE WIDER SMILE.

A news story from Rome relates that the cab drivers, suffering from unseasonable cold, got out their overcoats. The law regulates the wearing of overcoats. It is not permissible until Nov. 1. Why such a law was not explained we do not know, but when government goes either Mussolini or Stalin the individual is likely to find that one decree regulates the fires in his stove and another the clothing on his back. The cab drivers reasonably protested that the regulation should be mandatory also on the weather. The municipality considered the protest and later informed the drivers: "It is strictly forbidden to wear heavy overcoats until Nov. 1, but you are permitted to wear them."

Before we smile we might recollect that the United States government has given a subsidy of some twenty million dollars to an industry making a beverage which the government proposes the citizens shall not use. It is strictly forbidden, but you are permitted to do it.

Editorial of the Day

[The Manchester Guardian.]

The date of M. Laval's departure to the United States has been fixed for Oct. 16. This will be the first time that a European prime minister has been invited to visit Washington by a President of the United States, as Mr. MacDonald's visit in 1929 was made at his own suggestion. Mr. Hoover's invitation to M. Laval seems to have caused an uneasy feeling among certain French commentators that M. Laval may be seduced from the straight and narrow path of French nationalism. Indeed, Mr. Hoover's invitation never created a furore of enthusiasm in France, and it seemed doubtful at first whether it would be accepted. At the time when it was received the consequences of sterling depreciation had not fully developed, and it seemed likely that Mr. Hoover's chief topic would be disarmament. The results of the economic crisis, and particularly the tendency for gold to be withdrawn from the United States, make financial conversations inevitable, and M. Laval may be expected to take a large staff of treasury officials. At the same time, Mr. Hoover's desire to talk about disarmament can hardly have diminished. He is fighting for reductions of over £30,000,000 on United States naval expenditure, and he expects help from Europe against his admirals. The intervention of the United States in the discussions at Geneva on the armaments truce was the direct result of Mr. Hoover's personal position in relation to his "big navy" opponents. But what can Mr. Hoover expect to persuade the French premier to do, or say, or even think? The unfortunate thing is that the French attitude toward the disarmament conference is fixed, logical, and consistent. It was expressed in a lucid and categorical memorandum to the league of nations last July. It is extremely unlikely that it will change before the conference, and M. Laval would certainly be sacrificing his office if he made any verbal concessions in America. Mr. Hoover is likely to be disappointed, and has been inadequately informed if he has been led to believe anything else.

HOW CHILDREN EAT.

THAT children have no particular objection to eating vegetables, whether it be spinach or something else, is one of the conclusions reached by Miss McLaughlin and associates as a result of an extensive study of the tastes and eating habits of children.

Primarily, a child's taste calls for just one food, and that is human milk. In so far as there is such a thing as a natural or inherited taste, the only one we have is for a rather flat, nonsweet milk. Tastes for all other foods are acquired. The first one we are trained to like is that of sweetened milk. Then follows fruit juices, cereal, and, in later years, cod liver oil. Taste for eggs, fats, meats, and vegetables are acquired later.

By the time children reach kindergarten age their tastes have been trained to call for milk, sugars, fats, meat, eggs, cereals, breads, and fruit juices; and they are well on in the education of the desire for vegetables, assuming a proper training.

When a child is set down before a mixed meal he will usually drink his milk first, then he will eat bread and butter, or cereal, and then eggs. The probability is that he will eat one food at a time, not touching his vegetables until he had eaten his bread and butter.

He will show an antipathy to vegetables with strong tasting juices. For instance, children are likely to leave to the last such vegetables as creamed onions or turnips or cabbage. They are not disposed to taste a vegetable that is new to them. On the other hand, they like vegetables that are crisp. As a rule they prefer raw vegetables and raw fruits to the same products cooked. However, if a good deal of sugar has been added to the cooked product they usually prefer that because of a sweet tooth.

Miss McLaughlin finds that the use of vegetables is on the increase. Within six years the consumption of cauliflower, lettuce, and spinach has much more than doubled. The increase in population in that period was trivial.

This investigation showed that, as a rule, children of kindergarten age are now eating at least two vegetables daily. This does not include potatoes, since this root is classed as a near bread rather than a vegetable by the dietitians.

The use of vegetables by children has the backing of physicians who care for children. They are capable of supplying about 10 per cent of the total energy required by a growing child and, in addition, they are rich in most of the needed minerals and vitamins. A child can get about one-fifth of all the iron he needs from ordinary amounts of regular vegetables given to children. And in some regions vegetables are a sufficient source of iodine. They are rich in all of the vitamins except D and perhaps E.

PROBABLY NO DANGER.

Mrs. H. W. M. writes:

1. I have two children, one 1½ years old and healthy, and the other 3½ years, with a congenital heart condition. Should an adult 55 years old, who is suffering from high blood pressure, weak heart and kidneys kiss and hug these children?

2. If a man is in the company of another man whose child is in the hospital with infantile paralysis, is it dangerous for the first man to visit my children?

REPLY.

1. There is nothing that is infective about high blood pressure, weak heart, and kidneys.

2. The probability is strong that there would be no danger. In this case two people would need to be carriers, and the one in contact with the case is not around the sick child much. However, since we know so little about how infantile paralysis spreads, there is some justification for rather wild eyed precautions.

HEIRS UNDER WILL.

Fort Atkinson, Wis., Oct. 18.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. How long after the death of a person in Illinois are the heirs notified as to their share of the property or estate? 2. Is there any stated time the heirs are to be notified and is it compulsory for the lawyer to notify the heirs within a certain time? 3. Is it the law in Illinois that a person has to be left $1, otherwise he is in position to contest the will? 4. Is there an age limit for a person making a will in Illinois? 5. What is the age limit of a person making a will if there is one? 6. Could a will be broken if a man remembered his grandchildren in a will with a small bequest, and not his own children? J. B.

1. Since a year is allowed for creditors to file their claims, there ordinarily is no distribution until after the expiration of such year.
2. See No. 1.
3. There is no such law.
4. No, but it is necessary that the person have mental capacity to make the will.
5. See preceding answer.
6. The facts stated would not be conclusive.

HUSBAND LIABLE.

Chicago, Oct. 16.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—My husband made application for a second mortgage loan and signed the application without my knowledge. Our property is in joint tenancy and I did not want nor approve of the mortgage and refused to sign. The loan company sent a bill for expenses incurred. We ignored bill. Now they had a lawyer write us a threatening letter that unless we paid he would bring suit to collect full amount of commission. Can this be done? J. H.

Yes. He could collect from your husband.

TEN HOUR LAW.

Chicago, Oct. 17.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I was unemployed for a long time and I finally found a job in a factory. Our regular hours are from 8 to 4:30, eight hours a day, one-half hour off for lunch. Now we work to 6:30, that makes ten hours a day. Even that isn't enough—we were told that we have to work to 8:30 certain evenings. Isn't that against the law? They don't let us punch our time cards when we work to 8:30, which proves that they are afraid they will get caught. Our foreman says we will be laid off if we refuse to stay until 8:30. M. S.

Illinois has a ten hour law applicable in specified employments. We suggest that you state your facts to the factory inspector, Transportation building, Chicago.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

MANCHURIA, PERSONALLY CONDUCTED.

For one reason I regret exceedingly that Japan has brought Manchuria back into the spotlight. I am really glad that M. Laval, and especially his pretty daughter, Josette, has crowded Manchuria off the front page and back to page seventeen, next to pure reading matter, as the advertisers say. Of course, whether it's really pure or not is a matter of opinion, but, anyhow, I'm glad when Manchuria gets chased away to some corner of the paper where I won't see it. I can't help it; I'm so thin skinned I bruise easily, and every time I see the name Manchuria I turn red away back behind the ears.

The reason is that I received the most terrible embarrassment of my life in Manchuria. I could have sent that story to the Niuchwang Daily Bladder and got five dollars from the editor of the "My Most Embarrassing Moment" column, only there wasn't a "Most Embarrassing Moment" column in the Niuchwang Daily Bladder; there wasn't even a Niuchwang Daily Bladder, and they wouldn't have had five dollars if there had been. But it was a most embarrassing moment just the same. It was indeed.

I went up to the Gulf of Pechili, west of Manchuria, on a newspaper dispatch boat, the Fa Wan (which the American newspapers, to my intense disgust, insisted on spelling "Fawn"), under instructions to form nice, chatty, sociable contacts with both the Russian and Japanese armies, getting large gobs of hot news about their battles and then rushing down to Cheefoo as fast as that wallowing old tub of a Fa Wan could get there and hurling my lurid dispatches on the wire to thrill a frenzied world.

The only trouble with this arrangement was that both the headquarters of the Russian and Japanese armies did not think much of it. The Russians said that if a wild-eyed, unauthorized foreign galoot came snooping around their lines they would shoot him at sunrise; they might not even wait for sunrise. The courteous Japanese deeply regretted to inform me that, while it would simply break their hearts and desolate their lives forever, they would be reluctantly compelled to hang me forthwith. Not encouraging, but the home office said to treat all such communications with silent contempt and to go forth and dig up some news. I decided to pick me out some nice, pleasant town in Manchuria where there were neither Jap nor Ruskie and where I could nose around and get hold of what information was lying about loose. So I picked Niuchwang, in Manchuria, at the north end of the gulf. Niuchwang sounded like a very fine town; it was occupied by neither Japanese nor Russians, had a large export trade of soy beans, millet, ginseng, deer horns, bean cakes, and a population of fifty thousand Chinese. I hurriedly turned the prow of my gallant ship Fa Wan towards Niuchwang and, after several long days and nights, we arrived up in that vicinity. The skipper gave me a kindly word of caution. He said that while, in so far as Cheefoo reports went, there were no Japanese or Russian soldiers in Niuchwang, that either army was mean and low down enough to occupy the place without telling Cheefoo anything about it; armies were like that, and that instead of us steaming triumphantly into Niuchwang we would do well to advance no farther than the three mile limit. Then, even if the military of either side was in possession of the city, they couldn't bother us. Outside the three mile limit we were safe and we could scout around and maybe talk to fishermen and find out what was doing on shore.

So we did just that. We slowed down, which was a hard thing to do, because the Fa Wan went slow enough anyhow, and dropped anchor when we thought we were a good three miles from land. We had to let out forty or fifty feet of chain on the anchor, as the water was quite deep out there. Neither the captain, who was English; the engineer, who was Scotch, nor the lowder, the chief boatswain and liaison officer between us and our crew, who was very Chinese, could tell me anything of the lay of the land or the way of the seas around Niuchwang, for none of them had ever been up there before. Still, as we swung at anchor in the long beautiful summer twilight we all felt very happy. We were on our way, gathering up the news of a great war, and there was the war right over there, but over three miles away, and we were protected by international law from being molested by rude military people. There we were, right in sight of the town, but as much out of the reach of Jap or Ruskie as though we had been on Mars. Said we, Again looking at the beautiful ocean and the gently heaving waves, we went below and turned in.

I was awakened the next morning by an awful jabbering from the forty Chinese in our crew; they made as much noise as if there had been four hundred. I rushed up the gangway and looked around at the ocean. There was no ocean. Our lovely boat, the Fa Wan, was sitting calmly on the land. Sloppy, muddy land, but none the less land. And the night before we had anchored in forty feet of water. And our anchor hadn't broken and allowed us to drift in to shore; looking over the side we could almost reach over and touch the anchor, with one fluke deeply imbedded in the mud. And the anchor cable was intact. The Scotch engineer came up. "It mus' ha been the tide," said he. Tide! that was it! Tide! and we had never once thought of it. At the north end of the Gulf of Pechili the tide is the highest in the world, except in the Bay of Fundy. But I hadn't known that! What unsuspecting landsman would ever think of a tide over forty feet high.

And just then the lowder grabbed my coat and pointed towards the shore. "Makee look," gasped the lowder. Through my telescope I saw Russian soldiers on the beach getting into rowboats and pointing towards us. The tide was commencing to come in and they could row their boats when the water was two or three feet deep, but it would take ten or twelve feet of water to float the Fa Wan. Long before we could steam away the Russian soldiers would be climbing all over us. And we couldn't pull the international law on them, for we were no longer three miles from land. In fact, we were three miles from sea. And there came the Russian soldiers, with guns and bayonets and everything!

Embarrassing moments! My dear, you could have knocked me down with a feather!

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

OCTOBER 24, 1915.

CHICAGO.—Franklin R. Voorhees, head of the Franklin R. Voorhees company, general brokers, with offices in the New York Life building at 39 South La Salle street, was waylaid and shot as he was entering his home at 1016 Hyde Park boulevard last night and died three hours later in Mercy hospital.

LONDON.—J. L. Garvin, writing in the Observer, says: "Responsible citizens must prepare themselves for the probability that within from ten days to three weeks German supplies will be pouring in full traffic through Sofia towards the Bosporus. Afterwards, unless something unexpected happens as a result of the arrival in the east of Sir Charles Monro, the German emperor may take his special train via Vienna and make his spectacular entry into Constantinople."

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The long delayed "British note," protesting against interference with American commerce, tonight had the approval of President Wilson and lacked only the signature of Secretary of State Lansing. It is a demand for freedom of the seas.

PARIS.—Supported by suffocating bombs, strong German reconnaissance attacks were made on Tahure hill, but the enemy force were almost destroyed by the French infantry and machine guns, according to an official report.

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—With solemn and impressive ceremonies and brilliant entertainments Yale university closed the celebration of the completion of its second century of life. The events of the day were participated in by President Roosevelt and other great men in public life, church dignitaries and heads of many educational institutions. Never has there been an occasion of the kind which brought together so notable an assembly. Graduates to the number of more than 5,000 were in the city and fully 150,000 strangers were visitors. Men noted in nearly all walks of life donned the cap and gown and marched across the famous campus in the impressive parade. In Hyperion theater, where the honorary degrees were conferred, a notable address was delivered by Justice Brewer of the United States Supreme court. President Roosevelt was the last to be given a degree.

CHICAGO.—Three men were arrested in New York carrying a valise filled with postage stamps of large denominations, and this leads the authorities to believe the prisoners were connected with the robbery of the Chicago postoffice day before yesterday when $74,610 worth of stamps were stolen by men who broke into the vault through old construction tunnels.

50 YEARS AGO TODAY

WASHINGTON.—Attorney General McVeagh expects to bid formal farewell to official life tomorrow or the next day.

CHICAGO.—The dedication of the new Michael Reese hospital occurred yesterday in the presence of several hundred of the best class of the Hebrew citizens of Chicago. The elegant and commodious building which the generosity of the Jewish millionaire has given to the city could scarcely afford shelter for the large gathering.

WASHINGTON.—The Washington Post contains an extraordinary story about an alleged scandal in the government printing office, in which the grossest immoralities are charged. The story is that some person connected with the office has permitted old hags to be carried on the rolls who were in point of fact procuresses and that it is their business to seduce young girls who were also on the rolls on starvation wages.

THE NEW TRANSLATION OF THE BIBLE.

Chicago, Oct. 18.—The article in Sunday's TRIBUNE on the Americanized Bible, by Dr. Edgar J. Goodspeed, provokes the thought that however well it be done it were better left undone.

To accept the book as the inspired work of God becomes increasingly difficult as the handiwork of man is brought more and more in evidence. The King James version or the Wycliffe translation is far enough back in the dim past that for most of us the note of authority is as firm as if it came clear from the time of Christ. Also, patient research may be enough to enable one to make valuable footnotes or marginal comment, but it is not enough for replacement work. The research man should collaborate with a poet—or at least with some one with a nice perception of "the beauty of the singing words," a perception which these scholarly translators singularly lack.

J. W. FARR.

THE NEW GAS.

Chicago, Oct. 19.—Most of the gas appliances in Chicago were never designed to burn natural gas and from my observation, which, I will allow, may be wrong, I would say that better than 90 per cent cannot be adjusted to burn natural gas successfully. With the old gas it was possible to adjust the flame to sharp blue. I think it is impossible with the present adjustments of the air mixture and the gas velocity on the present appliances to obtain economical service on the new gas. CARL M. MILLER.

A QUESTION OF MORALS.

Lapeer, Mich., Oct. 15.—I have been a reader of your paper now, I think, about nine months. I like it very much so far as the general news is concerned. Your editorials relative to the wet and dry issue are disgusting in the extreme. If your paper exerted as much energy in trying to have the dry laws of our country enforced as it does in trying to tear down a just cause there would be fewer Al Capones and his henchmen. Of course, every man has a right to his own opinion, but when it comes to a question of morals I do not see how such can have more than one side. You may stop the paper when my subscription is out. J. W. TINDER.

TO END THE DEPRESSION.

Glasgow, Mont., Oct. 19.—The forty-eight states will paint all buildings that they can. They will build garages and will fence lots and they will build kitchens. Renters will build small houses to stop rent. They will plant trees on their lots. The counties will plant trees on the public highways. All manufacturers will start to work at once. They will pay their men $2 per day, which will give them $12 per week, sufficient to live on. The balance will be paid one year after date. This will give the manufacturers a chance to sell their goods.

If this method is used it will put eight million men to work! J. S. MCHENRY.

TAXES.

Chicago, Oct. 20.—An article in Saturday's edition of your newspaper, by Arthur Evans, "End Tax Strike and Fix Us . . . Is Teacher's Plea," attracted my attention, as I am a taxpayer and have possessed real estate for the last 22 years.

When you begin to compare the tax figure for 1926 with that of 1930 you can hardly blame taxpayers for not paying their taxes, as the taxes have been doubled and tripled since then. It is not by choice, therefore, that we take the alternative.

We do not even get one-half the amount of rental now that we did in 1926, and on those apartments which are rented we cannot collect the rent, and consequently we cannot meet the enormous taxes. Prior to 1927 I always paid my tax bills on time without putting up any argument, and it was not necessary to hire attorneys and try to secure favors of politicians. Taxes for 1928 and 1929 have been impossible to meet, and undoubtedly 1930 taxes will be even worse, and this will only mean that in time our property will be confiscated.

Needless to say, we are all in sympathy with the school teachers, and particularly those of us who have children attending school, but I hardly think that the taxpayers alone can be blamed for this situation. My opinion is, that if taxes come down according to the income of the real estate that real estate owners would be in a position to meet their tax bills, and in that way all city employes would be paid accordingly.

A. W. GOLDSTEIN.

THE WHITE COLLAR CLASS.

Chicago, Oct. 19.—There is another class that should be considered, the men and women who have been in fair circumstances in the past but have suddenly become stranded without funds, due to the general business condition; people who have some assets which they cannot realize anything on, due to banking conditions, and business depression.

These people are too sensitive to apply for alms and never have had any occasion to look for charity; some are too old for any kind of a position but could carry on their work were they given some help in the way of a loan for whatever assets that they may have. I would suggest that a separate committee be appointed for looking after this class. F. C. WORTH.

THE BEST THING FOR CHICAGO.

Chicago, Oct. 20.—The best thing that could happen to Chicago and Cook county would be to build the Austin-Kinzie superhighway which would give employment to about 20,000 people rather than to have them go begging for donations and make beggars out of the people who are anxious to work. If Gov. Emmerson will include the Austin-Kinzie superhighway in his call for the special session he will be blessed by all the people and probably will be nominated for Vice President of the United States on the Republican ticket next June. FELONS FLEE; 2 DEAD, 2 FREE; OFFICER SLAIN

Convict Kills Self; Guard Wounded.

York, Oct. 23.—[Special.]—convicts escaped over the wall the New Jersey state prison at this afternoon, leaving be- them a wounded guard, whom they disarmed. Two of the convicts were caught, but the two others died in a gun fight with pursuers in a cornfield miles away, after they had killed Philadelphia policeman. Smuggled guns and a workman's ladder placed against the wall aided the prisoners in their flight.

The policeman killed in the cornfield near Oxford Valley, Pa., where fugitives took refuge after a gun battle in which they raced from the prison crashed into a police pickup, was Joseph Campbell, a member of Philadelphia's bandit squad.

Convict Kills Slayer.

The slain policeman's companion, Joseph McCarthy, saw the shooting and immediately killed the slayer, sending a bullet through the convict's head just above the heart. The dead convict was identified later as James A. McGrath, who had escaped from Clinton prison at Dannemora, N. Y., and was facing a 40 year term when his 15 year sentence in the former penitentiary was up.

Jim Wairman, McGrath's companion in the corn patch, committed suicide just before the duel in which both the convict and the policeman were killed as two airplanes circled above his hiding place and a force of heavily armed pursuers began closing in. Preferring death to a return to the prison, the convict, who had only four more years of a 15 year sentence to serve, placed the muzzle of a riot gun in his mouth and pulled the trigger.

Second Escape for One.

The two convicts who got away were Frank Seibert and Joseph Stoddard, both of Newark. Stoddard, who had but two more years of a 3 year term to serve, but he was wanted in Pennsylvania for escaping from Eastern penitentiary there. Seibert had just begun serving a 15 year sentence for assault and robbery.

MORROW WILLS WIDOW ALL BUT ABOUT MILLION

Estate Is Believed Worth Twenty Million.

Hackensack, N. J., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—United States Senator Dwight W. Morrow left his estate to his widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Cutter Morrow, aside from approximately three-quarters of a million dollars to individuals in specific bequests, according to his will, filed here today for probate.

MRS. DWIGHT W. MORROW. [Acme Photo.]

This disposition of his wealth was accompanied by a statement in the will that Senator Morrow had complete confidence in Mrs. Morrow and knew that she would provide for herself and their children to the best interests of all concerned.

None of the children was mentioned by name in the will. They are: A son, Dwight W. Morrow Jr., and three daughters, the Misses Constance and Elizabeth Morrow and Mrs. Anne Lindbergh, who with her husband, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, is on her way to Englewood from the orient, where they were at the time of the senator's death.

Became Morgan Partner.

There was nothing to indicate the amount of the estate. Charles W. Hulst of Englewood, Mr. Morrow's attorney, would not estimate the amount of the late senator's wealth, but it was known that Senator Morrow, who rose from modest beginnings to become a partner in the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., was a multi-millionaire, and recent estimates have placed the value of his estate around twenty million dollars.

The largest bequests to institutions in the will, dated in January, 1927, are $200,000 to Senator Morrow's alma mater, Amherst, and $200,000 to Smith college, the alma mater of Mrs. Morrow and their two daughters. The $200,000 to Amherst is to be added to the college's general endowment, to be applied to the maintenance and increase of the professors' salaries.

Columbia university receives $50,000 and Union Theological seminary a like amount. The Smithsonian Institution of Washington, D. C., of which Senator Morrow was a trustee, was left $100,000.

Several Are Left $50,000.

Most of the individual bequests are to relatives and old friends. The senator's sisters, Mrs. Agnes M. Scandrett, Miss Alice Morrow, and Mrs. Hilda M. McIlvane, and his brother, Gen. Jay J. Morrow, each receive $50,000. Mrs. Morrow's sisters, Miss Annie S. Cutter and Mrs. Edith Cutter Yates, and Mrs. Morrow's mother, Mrs. Annie C. Cutter, are left $25,000 each.

Others receiving $25,000 bequests were: Prof. Frederick J. E. Woodridge, dean of the faculty of political science, philosophy and fine arts of Columbia university; Martin Egan of New York, an associate in the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., and Arthur S. Springer of Englewood, who was Senator Morrow's personal secretary for more than sixteen years.

It was learned today that Senator Morrow, who died on the afternoon of Oct. 5 of a cerebral hemorrhage at the age of 58, would have been a member of the American delegation to the coming disarmament conference in Geneva if he had lived. President Hoover, it was understood, offered the appointment on Oct. 1.

MARRIED LIFE OF COUPLE RUNS INTO DIFFICULTY

Whereas Mary and Rudolph Beckman spent 24 years together unmarried, rearing a family of seven children, their married life was brief. They were married in the domestic relations court Thursday after Judge Joseph A. Graber learned that a marriage license but no ceremony had served to keep the couple united until a few months ago.

The marriage took place after Mrs. Beckman complained that Beckman had left their family abode at 4134 North McVickers avenue and had failed to contribute to their support since his departure three months ago. Yesterday it was revealed by Beckman that shortly after they returned to the McVickers avenue home, man and wife at last, that Mrs. Beckman drove him from the home.

This, said Beckman, was in direct defiance of their promise to Judge Graber, who married them and then formally reunited them, that they would start anew and try to live in peace together. When she told him to get out and stay out, he said, he returned to 7029 South Paulina street, where he has lived for the last few months.

Physicians Investigate Hospital

DOCTORS CHARGE HOSPITAL PAYS HIGHWAY POLICE

Find Auto Victims Are Being Exploited.

Many persons injured in automobile accidents in the northwest portion of the county have been transported by the highway police past reputable hospitals to the Des Plaines hospital, according to the charges made yesterday by a group of doctors. The hospital is located at 560 Des Plaines avenue, Des Plaines. It is not on the American Medical association's hospital register.

It is charged that the county highway police, who are now under the command of Lieut. James Meyering, brother of Sheriff Meyering, have not only carried injured persons past the hospitals at Wheeling and at Mount Prospect, but have removed patients from those hospitals to the Des Plaines hospital.

"We get paid for bringing patients to Des Plaines," the police are quoted as saying.

Harmon Case Recalled.

Attention was called to this hospital a year ago last summer when Paddy Harmon, sportsman and promoter, was fatally injured in an automobile accident near Palatine. Harmon and his wife, who was also injured, were driven past the Mount Prospect hospital to Des Plaines.

After Harmon died there was an inquiry into the bill presented by the hospital. Officials of the state department of registration said they found that Robert E. Parks, then general manager of the hospital, had posed as a doctor, and had been convicted of practising medicine without a license. At one time, it was said, Parks was an auto mechanic by day and a surgeon by night.

Recently a new hospital was opened in Des Plaines, at the intersection of Rand and River roads, called the Northwestern hospital, and presided over by Dr. William R. Campbell. The new hospital has received the approval of the American Medical association.

Doctors Hold Meeting.

Yesterday Dr. Edward L. Larson, head of the Wheeling hospital, Dr. Alfred Wolfarth, head of the Mount Prospect hospital, and Drs. C. A. Earle, A. M. Purves, John Krueger and Edward Meiers, all of Des Plaines, met at the Northwestern hospital. Each of them condemned the police practice of hauling mangled auto victims long distances to the Des Plaines hospital.

"Just a short time ago the son of one of my patients was injured north of Wheeling and he was carried right past my hospital to Des Plaines," said Dr. Larson. "Another time a policeman came in and took a patient out of my hospital. He told me he would get $5 for taking the patient to Dr. Park's hospital.

Dr. Wolfarth of Mount Prospect said county police took a woman out of his hospital, saying they were going to take her to the Belmont hospital in Chicago, but they took her to Des Plaines.

Dangerous, Fishbein Says.

Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, said the practice of taking injured persons to police favored hospitals instead of to the nearest hospital is a dangerous one. There is no law compelling the police to do the proper thing in this regard, he said, so reputable physicians and the public must take action to protect themselves.

FOUR KIDNAPERS OF BROKER ROSENTHAL GET SIXTY YEARS EACH

New York, Oct. 23.—[Special.]—As notice that the city of New York will not tolerate kidnaping of wealthy men, holding them for ransom and terrorizing their families, Judge Joseph E. Corrigan imposed sentences of sixty years in prison today upon four men who were convicted of that offense in the Court of General Sessions last week.

They are Nicholas Rutigliano, who was manager of the Hotel Vendig; Albert Sileo, Theodore Adinolfi and Marcus Blumenthal, each of whom is an ex-convict.

On Aug. 11, under the direction of Rutigliano, who framed the plot, Blumenthal, Sileo and Adinolfi kidnaped Charles M. Rosenthal, Wall street broker, from in front of a house in Hamilton terrace to which he had been lured by Betty Stewart Green, a mulatto who passed for a white woman. The Green woman was tried with the four men and acquitted, as it was shown she did not know Rosenthal was going to be kidnaped. The kidnapers held Rosenthal in a flat in a Negro tenement house for seventeen days until Rosenthal's mother paid $50,000.

I. C. IS UNABLE TO DEPRESS TRACKS, OFFICIAL STATES

F. L. Thompson, vice president of the Illinois Central railroad, informed State Representative Elmer J. Schnackenberg yesterday that the railroad was not financially able to spend any money to depress the railroad tracks in 71st street and in Exchange avenue on the south side.

"More than two years ago we believed that we might be able to spend between $3,250,000 and $3,500,000 on the project," Mr. Thompson wrote. "Since then conditions have changed. Our suburban business is now approximately 20 per cent below what it was two and one-half years ago.

"The company's suburban revenue is not now sufficient to meet the fixed charges. I am sorry, therefore, to have to advise you that we are not in a position to make large expenditures of any character.

"I am certain that you are cognizant enough with the distressing situation which prevails as to railroad business and railroad revenues at this time to know that this letter is written in good faith."

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

NAVY DAY TALKS BE CENSORED TO PLEASE HOOVER

Officers Forbidden to Discuss Reductions.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams

is urging a policy of economies in the current budget between the White House and the heads of the navy in the matters of personnel when he is believed that the latest news bulletins and unending conferences of the naval officers behind the doors of Secretary Adams' office Tuesday at the navy day exercises in various parts of the country.

Following last Tuesday's cabinet meeting urgent telegrams had been received from the navy department officially modifying the original instructions sent out for the guidance of officers in the preparation of speeches and radio talks on Navy day. The new order, which marks a new era in official peacetime censorship of uniformed personnel directs that officers refrain from discussing the London naval treaty, the personnel or warship requirements of the navy, naval appropriations, or any controversial topics which might contribute to the present strained relations of the navy department with President Hoover.

Subjects Are Limited.

Announcement of the new "gag" policy for Navy day celebrations to be devoted to such topics as the "glory of the navy," its "traditions of daring" and the "purpose of its acts."

Further instructions sent out a week ago had urged naval speakers to use figures showing the weakness of the navy, call the attention of the country to the fact that the United States had been left far behind by other naval powers in warship building and popular support for a program calling for construction of an American navy second to none.

Naval officers were advised to point out that without added appropriations the United States would be 20 per cent under London treaty strength by the end of the year. The necessity of establishing 16,000 more enlisted personnel than is contemplated by the new Hoover budget for 1933, if naval strength is not to be seriously impaired, was suggested as a good topic for discussion.

Text Makes New Attack.

New developments of the day included the issuance of a new attack against naval officers by Chairman [illegible] Wood [Rep., Ind.] of the house appropriations committee and his disclosure that an informal investigation is now being made to determine responsibility for the "leaks" which resulted in premature publication of the $10,000,000 economy program submitted to President Hoover by Secretary Adams a few days ago. It was this publicity which furnished the impetus that ignited the presidential fuse against naval officers and caused Chairman Wood today to assert that the naval officers responsible should be "summarily fired" as recommendations against Hoover's economy program.

Although Secretary Adams declined to affirm or deny reports that President Hoover had directed the rescinding order to be issued, the circumstances surrounding the cancellation of the original Navy day policy left virtually no doubt that the White House was responsible.

Issue Down Order Issued.

It was disclosed that immediately following a morning visit from the White House Mr. Adams called for Rear Admiral [illegible] Upham, chief of the bureau of navigation, and chairman of the navy day committee handling Navy Department arrangements in coöperation with the United States Navy league, and instructed that all naval personnel be called to tone down their addresses.

At the same time that Rear Admiral Upham was dispatching his telegrams were sent out by Walter Reed Howe, national chairman of navy day exercises and Navy league executive, to all state chairmen, requesting that all Navy day speakers, whether civilians or officers, be asked to avoid naval topics which are or may become controversial." The Howe telegrams went forward after conversation with Secretary Adams.

Fish Store Owner Robbed of Fish, Also His Cash

Charles Gifford, 4533 North Spaulding avenue, owner of a fish store at 5201 North Hermitage avenue, was on his way home with fish for dinner and $104, his day's receipts, last evening when two armed men accosted him at Wilson and Sawyer avenues and ordered him into an alley. They took his fish and his money.

NEW HUDSON BRIDGE COSTING 60 MILLIONS WILL BE OPEN TODAY

New York, Oct. 23.—[Special.]—The $60,000,000 span over the Hudson river, "the George Washington bridge," was receiving its final dusting off today for its formal dedication tomorrow afternoon.

The bridge spans the Hudson river from 179th street and Riverside drive to Fort Lee, N. J.

The New Jersey highway approaches to the bridge were dedicated this afternoon with members of the New Jersey state highway commission and the state officials present.

MAJ. GEN. H. L. SCOTT. [Central News Photo]

These exercises were comparatively brief. No set speeches were made. Maj. Gen. Hugh L. Scott, chairman of the commission, cut the tape stretched across the roadway before the toll booths at Hudson street, Fort Lee. The chairman's granddaughter, Anna Scott Hunter Stockton, 5 years old, and her chum, Elizabeth Sinclair, also 5, of Princeton, N. J., held the ribbon.

Tomorrow, however, when the big structure is opened to traffic there will be speechmaking and music aplenty. The governors of two states—New York and New Jersey—will participate in the ceremony and Secretary of the Navy Charles F. Adams will address the crowd from a temporary grandstand erected in the center of the great structure.

When all of the eight traffic lanes are paved it will be possible for 30 million vehicles to pass over the bridge yearly, and later, it is expected, a lower floor will be added to bring the capacity up to 60 million.

The huge span will clear the masts of the biggest ocean going vessels and its enormous cables, looping downward 325 feet from the peaks of their supporting towers 635 feet high, are to be illuminated at night to warn aviators.

It is a toll bridge. The fee for passenger cars is 50 cents; trucks, 75 cents; buses with four wheels, $1, and with six wheels, $10.

GANDHI SCOLDS DELEGATES TO INDIA PARLEY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 23.—Mahatma Gandhi, India's Nationalist leader, emerged today from the semi-retirement in which he has been for the last few days to give his fellow delegates at the round table conference a sound scolding. The scolding was administered at a meeting of the federal structures committee which was discussing the constitution of the proposed federal supreme court for India.

The wizened little "holy man," huddled up in his blanket at the side of Lord Sankey, lord chancellor and chairman of the committee, spoke from his chair without rising. In his quiet, monotonous voice he told the delegates what he thought of them for trying to surround the court with safeguards, which, he said, indicated they did not believe they could conduct legal affairs in an impartial manner.

Gandhi declared he was willing to take a chance on trusting that India would evolve courts and judges equal to any in the world;

Gandhi Reveals Inconsistency.

He also objected to the constant references to the crown in the discussions, and here he revealed a curious inconsistency that puzzles many western minds. After saying the crown had no place in his conception of an independent India, he declared that India should have her own privy council, drawn from her own people, who understand the problems of the poor people. He was apparently unconscious of the fact that the privy council is composed of private advisers to the crown.

Discussing judges' salaries, he declared that India could not pay salaries anything like $1,700 monthly, and he was confident that there are lawyers in India who would be willing to live the lives of the poor and render justice.

"I realize the terrible power arrayed against me," he said. "All lawyers and all princes are against me."

Asks Greater Powers.

Gandhi today cabled the working committee of the Nationalist congress asking for power to act as its plenipotentiary in settling Hindu-Moslem differences.

Other Hindu delegates declare, however, that they are no nearer a settlement than they were six weeks ago. The Mahasaba party, which is the largest Hindu group, is still opposed to any concessions to the Moslems, while the "untouchables" refuse to allow their fate to be committed to the Hindu majority.

La Farge Tells Another Vivid Indian Story

Takes Latin American View of Subject.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Sparks Fly Upward," by Oliver La Farge. [Houghton-Mifflin.] Published this week.

OLIVER LA FARGE published his first novel two years ago. It was a story of the Navajo Indians and was called "Laughing Boy." For a few days it was only an unusually good first book by a young anthropologist turned novelist. Soon it began to be talked about as the year's fictional surprise. Then suddenly it actually WAS the year's fictional surprise, because it was awarded the Pulitzer prize.

OLIVER LA FARGE.

When the award was made Mr. La Farge—at that time twenty-eight years of age—celebrated his success in a romantic fashion. He shook the dust of civilization from his feet and went back to trudge through the keen, thrilling alkali dust of New Mexico and Arizona which had given him the book, thus completing the cycle.

That "trudged through" is slightly inaccurate in its literal sense, for what he did was to get on a horse and ride for five or six hundred miles through the Indian country. But spiritually he did trudge through that dust and renewed his soul thereby.

At the time of the award he said that his next novel was not going to be just a repetition of his first. He believed it unwise for a writer to do the same thing, or even approximately the same thing, over and over. His next novel, he said at that time, would be laid in Central America and would be, with a vastly different background, a different novel altogether from "Laughing Boy."

That promised novel was published on Wednesday. "Sparks Fly Upward" has in common with "Laughing Boy" only the fact that it, like its predecessor, grew out of the author's scientific work as an anthropologist and that both of the books probably are minutely accurate in their pictures of life and customs and that the same pen obviously fashioned the sentences which gave them both life.

They are both concerned with Indians, but the Indians of "Laughing Boy" seem in no wise related to the Indians of "Sparks Fly Upward." "Indian" is a vast word, inclusive of many races philologically, a "patient" word in its willingness to bear many burdens.

"Laughing Boy" was essentially a lyric love story. "Sparks Fly Upward" is a love story secondary to the story of a man's groping for his fate. The love which the hero of "Sparks Fly Upward" bore for the wife of his benefactor was not only the immediate but the contributing cause of his forging of his life's medal, but the great conflict in his soul was always a conflict with himself, with his inheritance. He was born the son of an Indian and a white muleteer, a revolutionist who was killed in battle. His mother, during the battle, while she was searching for shoes in which to bury her man, saved the life of a great aristocrat. She and the boy were taken under his patronage, and when he was grown Estaban was known by his benefactor's name, was supposed to be his natural son, and enjoyed every privilege of that position. When his benefactor married a young wife of great beauty the boy loved her at sight. It had never made any difference before in his life what his station was—he was a handsome lad, known to be the great man's favorite, a good match for any one, and he would have lived his life out on the hacienda if the old man had not sent him off to be a soldier, whether suspecting the boy's love or not, his "son" never knew. He was by nature (by inheritance he grew to believe) a soldier; fate made him a leader. Soon he found that the cycle of his fate was completed in a way which he never would have dreamed possible. But it was a fate which he willed, not which was inevitable. That spiritual conflict is a quite different fictional concept than the lyrical idyl which was the core of "Laughing Boy."

India's Animals Heroes of Another Author.

BY AGATHA L. SHEA.

"Ekorn," by Haakon Lie. [Laidlaw.]
"Picture Book of Animals," by Isabel Lord. [Macmillan.]

ANIMAL stories always stand high on the list of children's reading favorites and the current fall lists boast a variety of them. For the child who likes to read factual stories of animals there is Haakon Lie's "Ekorn," a translation from the Norwegian and a story of forest life, fascinating and authentic.

It tells the story of a family of squirrels, and in particular of Ekorn, one of the three little red babies that awakened to life one morning in the comfortable nest in the old fir tree. Children will follow the little squirrel's adventures with interest as he emerges from babyhood and learns to forage for food, to find shelter in time of need, and to protect himself against enemies. In addition to picturing the life of Ekorn and his brother and sister, the book presents an excellent picture of forest life as a whole, and is marked by a simplicity of language and a sympathetic portrayal of animal life which will make a strong appeal to young readers.

Not only is the story an exceptionally good one, but also an exceptionally well written one with many fine descriptions of the beauty of the woods and their people. Particularly memorable are those of the changes which the seasons bring to the forest and the tragedy and pathos of the tempest which brought devastation to so many of its defenseless little dwellers.

Illustrations are by Kurt Wiese, and altogether the book is one to be highly recommended to children of the nine to ten year group.

"Bunny, Hound and Clown" is another of Dhan Gopal Mukerji's collections of animal stories and legends of India emphasizing the oriental philosophy of companionship between man and his dumb brothers. The stories are interesting as examples of Indian legends and will be appreciated by students concerned with this field, as will also the introduction by the author. As for the younger children, to whom the title may be attractive, this second offering to them confirms the opinion expressed by this writer in connection with an earlier book, that Mr. Mukerji is far more successful in his appeal to young adolescents than to those who have not yet reached the age of idealism. In the latter field his appeal is always a decidedly limited one—in the former he is unsurpassed.

The third book, "Brave Tales of Real Dogs," is an attractive collection of dog stories which will appeal to any boy who has a dog or wishes that he had. All are true stories relating brave deeds of real dogs, including Chinook of South Pole fame, Barry the beloved St. Bernard, Ginger of moving picture fame, and many others. Large print and numerous illustrations make this a book particularly attractive to the young reader of nine to ten years.

"Edison and Morrow Both Poets," View of Joseph Auslander

Joseph Auslander, lecturing here yesterday on "What Poetry Can Do for You," deplored the fact that poetry in the modern age has been subordinated to the mere process of living unimaginatively.

In the past, he said, poetry was in the very blood of life, in the fabric of existence. We must get it back to make "reality less intolerable," he declared. "Poetry makes man's soul worth saving, makes living richly and abundantly possible. It is an attitude toward life and it is not confined to classes or professions. Morrow and Edison were poets," he said.

JUDGE ASSAILS POLICE CHIEF FOR BEATING DOCTOR

Tries Midlothian Officer; Decision Tuesday.

Police Chief Albert A. Terry of Midlothian was tried before Judge John Prystalski in the Criminal court yesterday on a charge of assaulting a physician with a deadly weapon. The case was heard without a jury and at the conclusion of the evidence the court took it under advisement after indicating that he disapproved of tactics used by Terry in arresting the doctor. Judge Prystalski said he would announce his decision on Tuesday.

POLICE CHIEF A. A. TERRY.

The prosecution witnesses were Dr. C. E. Steckbauer, 6137 Kenwood avenue, and his wife, Dr. Trena Steckbauer, also a physician. The husband said that on July 5, he and his wife were driving east on 147th street approaching Crawford avenue, a stop street. At the intersection, he slowed down, not to halt, but to such a speed that he could observe if other cars were coming. Satisfied that he was proceeding safely, he shifted gears, he testified, and swung north on Crawford avenue.

Beaten by Chief, He Says.

Chief Terry, on duty at the corner, halted Dr. Steckbauer after he had made the turn and informed him that he was under arrest. He began to pull the physician out of the car and because he "did not move fast enough," the policeman pulled a blackjack and beat him on the head and neck, the doctor declared. He exhibited a scar on his forehead as evidence.

As the chief wrestled with the physician Henry Jebbins, son of a Midlothian village trustee, came to his aid and helped the policeman, Dr. Steckbauer said. The doctor was taken to the police station, charged with reckless driving and with failing to halt at a stoplight and was put in a cell under a $1,000 bond.

The arrest occurred at 3 p. m., and Dr. Trena Steckbauer said she was not able to raise the bail until 3 a. m. the next morning. Steckbauer was subsequently tried before a justice of the peace and was found not guilty.

Admits Hitting Doctor.

Chief Terry was placed on the stand and under cross-examination by Assistant State's Attorney Henry Seyfarth, admitted striking the physician with the blackjack, but denied he had hit him upon the head. He struck at the doctor's hands to release them from the wheel, he said.

Judge Prystalski said, before taking the case under advisement, that he did not believe the use of the blackjack was "proper for such a minor violation."

AUDIT BUREAU DEFEATS MOVE TO REVISE RULE

The Audit Bureau of Circulations closed its eighteenth annual convention yesterday at the Stevens hotel after electing officers and defeating a resolution to modify the rule covering outside audits. The bureau comprises publishers, advertisers, and advertising agencies of the United States and Canada.

The defeated resolution was introduced on Thursday in the newspaper division to modify the rule covering outside audits so that the bureau should have to disclose the source of information on discrepancies found between their audit and the newspaper's own report of circulation. The resolutions committee determined that the resolution as amended to put the authority for divulging such information in the hands of the Audit Bureau of Circulations directors was in fact substantially the same as the present rule.

At the same time resolutions were submitted to the general session from the advertisers' division and the advertising agencies' division to the effect that there should be no weakening of this rule, as it has stood since the bureau was organized.

Two new directors of the bureau were elected. They are Howard Stodghill of the Louisville Courier-Journal, Louisville, Ky., and Felix Lowry of the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co., Chicago.

SEEKS CHANGE OF VENUE FOR BELL IN SANITY CASE

A change of venue will be demanded when the sanity hearing on behalf of Frank Bell, slayer of a north side restaurant proprietor, begins on Monday before Judge James J. Kelly in the Criminal court. A petition for the hearing saved Bell from death in the electric chair a week ago.

Attorney Ralph Sharp, representing Bell, served notice on the state's attorney's office yesterday that the change of venue would be asked.

This notice followed Attorney Sharp's appearance before Judge Kelly. He asked that the judge keep the state's alienists from testifying against Bell. "I have never heard of such an order," said Judge Kelly in refusing the request. "How can I stop any one from testifying?"

NORTHUP PROBES DISPUTED COURT RULE'S STATUS

First Assistant State's Attorney John E. Northup announced yesterday that he was investigating to determine whether rule 15 of the judicial rules was actually revoked. This rule allowed the state's attorney's office to file a certificate of prejudice, giving the prosecution a right similar to that which a change of venue offers for the defense. The Chicago Crime commission and the Chicago Bar association also have been asked to investigate.

On file in the office of the clerk of the Criminal court is a document dated March 31, 1931, and labeled "Rule 15 of the Criminal Court of Cook County, Amended." This amendment virtually prevents the prosecutor from filing a certificate of prejudice. It was reported that Prosecutor Northup intended to file such a petition to take the sanitary district graft case against Timothy J. Crowe and others from the court of Chief Justice Harry Fisher.

The amendment on file contains the names of 29 judges, a majority of the bench. Judges James J. Kelly, John Prystalski, and Rudolph Desort of the Criminal court said they signed the document, but did not recall that it had been adopted at any judges' meeting. Judge Philip Sullivan said it had been approved.

CHILD'S PLEA IN COURT WINS HER MOTHER CUSTODY

"I saw my papa's new wife sitting on his lap and I don't like it," lisped 8 year old Margie Feltinton yesterday in the court of Circuit Judge Daniel P. Trude. "Besides, I love my mama, and I want to stay with her."

Thus the girl answered the questions of the judge who sought to determine to which parent he should give her custody. Her father, Robert L. Feltinton, president of the Chicago Retail Collection bureau, had taken her from her mother, Mrs. Belle D. Feltinton, 3929 Jackson boulevard, several weeks ago. She appeared in court to demand the return of her daughter.

In the divorce decree entered March 5, Mrs. Feltinton was given custody of the child. Feltinton, however, has since remarried and asked that his daughter be placed in his care. After hearing Margie's opinion, Judge Trude ordered her returned to her mother.

SANITARY BOARD TIES UP WORK ON $5,000,000 PROJECTS

Contracts for more than $5,000,000 worth of construction were tied up yesterday by a resolution of the sanitary district trustees not to make any more payments on contracts let under the prevailing wage act. A report on the validity of the contracts was ordered from William Rothman, sanitary district attorney, for the next meeting of the board on Nov. 5.

The board's action followed the knocking out of the law by the state Supreme court. As a result of the board's action work may be stopped on three major improvements.

If the contracts are found to be invalid, it will probably be necessary, according to Thomas J. Bowler, president of the board, to advertise for bids for the completion of the work.

The contracts in question are for the pump and blower house at the Calumet treatment plant, $1,411,398, held by John Griffiths & Son company; aeration and settling tanks at the Calumet plant, $2,182,796, held by the Herlihy Mid-Continent company, and the west side intercepting sewer, $1,620,510, held by the W. J. Newman company.

RITES TODAY FOR WALTER GITHENS, AUTO PIONEER

Funeral services are to be held for Walter Lee Githens, 921 East 44th street, pioneer automobile dealer, today at 4 p. m. at 4227 Cottage Grove avenue.

Mr. Githens, who was 69 years old, died Thursday after an emergency operation for an abdominal ailment. A native of Mendota, Ill., he came to Chicago in 1879. From 1881 to 1892 he was in the wholesale clothing business. He was later manager of the Hyde Park Electric Light company, a post he held until 1899.

In that year Mr. Githens entered the auto cab business, then a precarious venture. He also sold automobiles in 1899, having one of the original showrooms on Michigan avenue. He continued in the business until 1929, when he retired. Mr. Githens was one of the founders of the Chicago Automobile Trade association and of Githens Brothers company.

DR. SCHNITZLER BURIED IN SIMPLE GRAVE; NO HONOR

VIENNA, Oct. 23.—(AP)—Dr. Arthur Schnitzler, whom the world knew as a master of letters rather than a doctor of medicine, was buried today in a pauper's grave of his own creation.

There were neither honorary pallbearers nor wreaths nor an obituary announcement to hail the passing of the dramatist whose "Anatol" and other writings on gay Vienna life enriched the literature of his generation. Only a bouquet of chrysanthemums decorated the simplicity of the rough wooden coffin.

The funeral service consisted of the reading of a Jewish ritual, without song or sermon, and occupied only ten minutes. Friends from artistic, diplomatic and official circles stood around the grave. Dr. Schnitzler ordered in a will written 20 years ago that he be given a Spartan funeral and that the money saved thereby be distributed among hospitals.

Deaths of a Day

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—(AP)—Mrs. Laura Fordon Fry, wife of the Rev. Charles L. Fry, widely known in Lutheran church circles, died. She was for 22 years executive secretary of the Women's Missionary Society of the United Lutheran Church in America.

KEARNEY, Neb.—(AP)—William Butler, 63, past grand patriarch of the Nebraska I. O. O. F., died. He had been ill eight months with heart disease.

PARTY LEADERS AND OFFICIALS AT HEALY RITES

Officialdom and political leaders of both parties thronged the funeral yesterday of Thomas J. Healy, banker, lawyer, and for a quarter of a century a power in the Deneen Republican organization. The services were held at St. Ambrose church, 47th street and Ellis avenue, the funeral sermon being preached by the Rev. Edward S. Keough. Interment was at Mount Olivet.

The active pall bearers, close friends of Mr. Healy, were ex-Senator Charles S. Deneen, Edward R. Litsinger, Leonard Reid, Anthony Czarnecki, Thomas Boyer, and John E. Bigane. The honorary pall bearers included more than 100 men prominent in the business and political life of Chicago and Illinois.

Mr. Healy, who died at Sacred Heart sanitarium, Milwaukee, Tuesday, after a nervous breakdown, was 56 years old. He had been in politics since he was 24, and for more than two decades his philosophical bent of mind and native wit gave him a reputation among Chicago politicians.

MURPHYS FROM COUNTY CLARE: PLEASE NOTICE

James McSweeney, secretary of the police department, going over the daily mail yesterday, came across a letter from New York City. It was written by Alfred Finn of 288 St. Nicholas avenue. Secretary McSweeney started to read the letter, then uttered a perplexed "H-m-m." The letter said:

"I am trying to find a family named Murphy. One member of the family is on the Chicago police force. Would you please send me the address of Policeman Murphy? P. S.: I think he comes from County Clare, Ireland."

Secretary McSweeney got out the roster of policemen named Murphy. On the list were fifty Murphys. Ten of them were from Ireland, two each from Tipperary, Galway, and County Clare. Near the bottom of the column, McSweeney came across the name: "John Murphy No. 2, County Clare."

He jotted down the address, then sat down and wrote a note to Mr. Finn, saying he hoped this Mr. Murphy was the right Mr. Murphy.

Mrs. Gladys H. Bevans Tells Daily How to Guide Children

The Marriage Racket

By VINA DELMAR

SYNOPSIS.

Irma Corbin, while playing a week's vaudeville engagement in Thrace, an upstate New town, is showered with invitations by Bill Fitzroy, friend of her pianist, Wallace Graham, a widower friend of Bill's. Before the week is up Wallace asks Irma to be his wife. Bill's proposal to her is of a different nature. Irma quarrels with Bill's partner and quits the act. She marries Wallace and settles down to a dull life with him. Wallace has a young daughter, Mildred, who has grown up under the domination of her Aunt Tessie. A baby son arrives to compensate Irma for any flaws in Wallace's character. The baby becomes the center of her universe. Wallace's life-insurance policy makes the trip possible, and Irma leaves the baby. She is upset by a letter received in Paris from Aunt Tessie. They meet Russell Byrnes, a wealthy bachelor from New York, through friends on the boat. He has a cabin on a boat sailing in two days, which Irma persuades Wallace to take. Back in Thrace they find the baby well, but Mildred planning to break her marriage with Scott Avery. Wallace refuses his consent to the marriage. Irma takes Mildred out of school and appoints Irma to guard her. Jane Malcolm, a school-mate of Mildred. The two girls slip out of the house and fly away in Jane's car. Wallace returns home Wallace learns that his daughter has eloped. Wallace accuses Irma of having Mildred off to get rid of her.

INSTALLMENT XXX.

A MARRIAGE ON THE ROCKS.

Irma sat down heavily and a silence fell upon the room. Neither looked at the other. Each was busy with thoughts of old bruises and new wounds. They sat so while Rose came in and clanked and rattled dishes and silverware in the room behind them. Upstairs the baby uttered a long, lazy wail and Irma went up to look at him. When she came down again Wallace was gone. She saw him backing the car out of the driveway and guessed that he was going to the Malcolms to interview Jane.

A sudden surge of hope filled her heart. Perhaps Jane would tell him that Irma was blameless. Still that wouldn't help. Nobody could convince him that she hadn't suspected the plot and purposely made herself scarce. But what did she want exoneration for, anyhow? What did it matter what Wallace thought about her? The side of her nature that had watched Wallace lovingly all evening craved vindication merely so that he would lay his head upon her shoulder and let her sympathize with him. But that was finished now. Always, through the days when she had trusted him and thought he had returned, and through the nights when they had lain side by side, and she believed that she hated Mildred. While he kissed her, ran errands for her, supported her, all that time he had been thinking that she hated Mildred. Poor, poor, he had thought her love for the baby a depressing, morbidly jealous manifestation. That much he had said tonight.

Too bad he had married her. Too bad for him. Certainly nothing but comfort and worry had come of the marriage. The baby had given him pleasure. He had doubted her, challenged the quality of her love for the child, and had accused her of a filthy plot against Mildred. He didn't love him. He couldn't. And certainly she didn't love him. She never had. There had been admiration and respect but never love. Well, it was over. Wallace had given her too little happiness for her to overlook his attack on her integrity. And she had brought him too much trouble for him to regret the tumultuous move.

At two o'clock she went upstairs. Wallace had not come in yet. She undressed. If he had gone to Whipplestown to search for Mildred and Scott. there was no trouble. As she undressed she thought she heard him on the stairs, and with further attentiveness to the sound of the footfalls assured her that it was Aunt Tessie. Mildred's door was closed and Aunt Tessie walked by it without suspecting her charge safely asleep.

Irma did not open her own door to tell of the elopement. She was no longer a part of the Graham household. Tomorrow there would be only Wallace and Aunt Tessie left.

In the morning when Irma awoke she found that Wallace had spent the night in Mildred's room and was gone again. It was just eight thirty by her clock and a mild curiosity stirred her. Had he left a half hour early out of time for the purpose of evading her, or had business concerning Mildred called for early attention? Not that it mattered.

She dressed herself and the baby and went downstairs. There was no sign of Aunt Tessie. Irma had not expected to see her. Aunt Tessie would have heard the news from Wallace and would be prostrate with grief in the privacy of her own room.

Rose was washing the early breakfast dishes when Irma entered the kitchen. She smiled at Irma, greeted the baby playfully and turned from the sink to prepare another breakfast. Rose was cheerful, reliable, and proud of the baby. The breadth of her shoulders and the strong, pleasant face would be pleasant allies in the battle that loomed ahead.

"Oh, I hope been there, Mrs. Graham."

"I mean to stay. To work there."

"I'm going," Irma said slowly. "I'm going today. The baby and I. I thought perhaps you'd come along to take care of him."

Rose looked at the baby. He was sitting on the linoleum beating the floor with a wooden spoon and the white ones with his bare hand. He watched him a moment, smiling thoughtfully, then she said, "He's cute, Mrs. Graham. I'd like to go but the baby'll grow up and then what have I got? Here I got my young man."

"I don't know you had a young man, Rose."

"Sure."

"Who?"

"Why, Mrs. Graham?"

"You know that you are not an excellent cook, don't you?"

"Oh. Well, Rose, Mr. Graham isn't so awfully sold on your plain cooking. Frankly you were kept here because you were fine with the baby. I'm sure that after I take him away you'll find yourself out of this job."

"Job! Maybe. Well, then I marry my young man." A deep sigh.

"I'd rather do that than come to New York with me, Rose?"

Rose flushed painfully. "Excuse me, Mrs. Graham, yes. I like you, ma'am, and I'm crazy about the baby, but, my stars, I got friends in Chicago, and New York is so hard to get friends in. Anyhow, I marry and have babies of my own here and in New York maybe I'd never find a young man."

"I think you would, Rose, but stay where you're happiest. I hope you have many healthy babies and a happy life."

"Thanks, Mrs. Graham. Will you have some farina with the baby?"

Irma was a trifle crushed to have Rose turn her down. She had not known that. Somehow Rose had figured largely in her plans. It would be tough to face things with a new, unproven woman minding the baby. However, that was just something to make it harder. The loss of Rose's companionship dampened Irma's spirits considerably. She began to wonder if by her glance the most important issue, the one upon which all her plans were based, would fall through. The worry caused her to eat swiftly so that she might know as soon as possible what the future held.

It was almost half past nine when she left the table. Well into the morning in the Graham household, but Bill Fitzroy would still be sleeping. She hated to wake him but he would forgive her when he knew everything.

Bill's voice, husky and irritable, snapped at her till he knew who she was. Then he was aware of the sudden change which appeared in his tone and she noticed it as a good sign.

"Bill, I hate to wake you, but this is important. Of course, I mean important to me."

"Then it's important to me, too."

"It's sweet of you to say that. I wonder if I could see you?"

"Not at the moment."

"I guess I wouldn't want to. I'll bet you need a shave. No kidding around, Bill, could I see you this morning?"

"Sure, I'll come over as soon as I'm dressed. Anything wrong?"

"I'll tell you when I see you. No sickness or death, however, if that means anything to you. But listen, I'd rather you didn't come here."

"Well, look, do you want to come over here? I'll dress right away and meet you in the lobby. You can have some breakfast with me."

"Okay. If by chance you see or speak to Wallace in the meanwhile, don't mention me. After our interview you can tell him anything you like."

"See you right away, Bill. Goodby."

He was waiting in the lobby of the Bartrum House when she arrived. He knew he had been waiting fifteen minutes. It had taken Irma longer to prepare herself for public than she had counted on. She had lived in Thrace long enough to imbibe a respect for the sacred precincts of the Marble room and had completely forgotten that in other days she had entered it with an inexpensive frock, rundown heels, and a battered hat.

They chattered over-brightly and with a self-consciousness noticeable each to the other as they crossed the lobby, entered the dining room and were shown to a small table which they had occupied before.

When they were seated and the waiter temporarily disposed of Bill said, "Now, out with it, Irma? I guess you're anxious to spill it, aren't you?"

"Guess I am. Well, for a beginning I'll tell you that my marriage is on the w. k. rocks."

Good morning!

Mr. Barrymore admits that he would rather fish than act. He also sighingly conceeds that, in order properly to follow a hobby, a man must have plenty of money—$40,000,000, thinks Mr. Barrymore. This being the case, he probably will remain with us for a long time. Let's hope so, if he keeps on making movies like "Svengali" and "The Mad Genius."

The latter production is an adaptation of a play, "The Idol," by Martin Brown, in which Lionel Atwill appeared some two years ago. In delineates engrossingly the fantastic story of the son of a premier danseuse who, chained to earth by a club foot when he yearns to be dancing, grows into a bitter, eccentric, disillusioned man.

Suddenly, while located in a tiny Russian village, there comes into Tsarakov's life a little boy, lithe, handsome, "with legs of flexible steel such as mine should have been——"

The former's whole life becomes immersed in that of the lad. Every thought, every ambition, is bent toward making Fedor what Tsarakov had longed to be. And in his workings toward this end Tsarakov is utterly unscrupulous.

Fifteen years after the meeting the two are famous. Tsarakov is a maestro of note, closely guarding the interests of his protegé who is a sensation on the Parisian stage and in love with a featured member of his ballet.

This last will never do! Liaisons for Fedor, yes! Marriage—No! It would ruin his career. Tsarakov concocts a Machiavelian plot to separate Fedor and Nana, but meets an unexpectedly stern spirit in his foster son. Since there is no alternative the youth quits his benefactor. He and Nana are married.

Misfortune attends them, for Tsarakov constitutes himself their Nemesis. Until at last Nana comes to him in despair and offers to do anything, anything if Fedor may again come into his own.

The denouement is startling!

"The Mad Genius" is beautifully acted and magnificently staged, costumed, and directed. Donald Cook gives a warmly appealing characterization of Fedor. Marian Marsh is adorable as Nana. Charles Butterworth is pretty funny—but not AWFULLY funny—as the devoted friend of Tsarakov. The rôle didn't have much to offer my favorite comedian this trip.

See you tomorrow.

Official Contract

By Charles True Adams.

(International bridge authority; author of "Official Contract at Sight.")

THE EXIT PLAY.

A child will spend hours building a house with blocks. When he gets all through building he will look at it a few moments and then generally he kicks it and it all comes tumbling down.

Yesterday a hand which was a time honored example of an elimination play was discussed. After carefully trying to build this idea up in your mind I am going to kick it down. I am going to show you a defense to the elimination play. This defense is called an "exit" play. The hand:

NORTH.
♥—K, 8, 6, 5
♦—8, 6, 3, 2

WEST	EAST
♠—K, J, 10, 2	♠—8, 7, 6, 4, 3
♥—9, 4	♥—7
♦—A, K, Q, 9	♦—7, 5, 4

SOUTH (Dealer).
♠—A, Q
♥—A, Q, J, 10, 3, 2
♦—J, 10
♣—A, 9, 8

South bid two hearts. West doubled. North bid three hearts. East passed and South bid four hearts. Thereupon West, North, and East passed.

West took two diamond tricks, the third being trumped by South. South, having lost two tricks and realizing that he must lose an additional trick in clubs, sees that the only possibility of game lies in the successful elimination play. (West's double having placed the ♠ K in that hand, a finesse is doomed to failure.)

South leads two rounds of hearts, clearing that suit, and then leads a small club to dummy's king. West knows that he can take no further tricks in diamonds; that he can only take one trick in clubs, and that one trick will not stop game. There is only one possibility of stopping game and that is for West to obtain a lead of spades from his partner through South's tenace and up to West's K. Obviously the only chance for the partner to obtain the lead is in the club suit.

West can easily foresee South's attempt to put him in the lead with a club and to force the lead of a spade or some other suit that can be trumped by dummy, giving South a discard of the ♠ Q. West, therefore, throws his ♣ Q on South's small, which is taken by dummy's K. (If South does not take the trick in dummy, West will, of course, put him back in the lead with a club.) South now leads the remaining diamond from the dummy and trumps it in his own hand. He then leads the ♣ A. West discards his J, completely blocking South's attempt to put him into the lead on the next round of clubs.

West knows that if East has the ♣ 10 he will take the final club trick and lead a spade, which will set South. If East has not got the ♣ 10 the game could not have been saved. The fact that South will take an extra trick if East does not have the ♣ 10 does not bother West. He is perfectly willing to risk this against the chance of stopping game.

East has the 10 spot; does take the club trick; does lead the spade to West (the only possible lead for East to make), and South is down one.

PLAY-A-PROBLEM: SOLITAIRE OR PARTNERS

Play this hand tonight at your bridge game. Keep a record of the bid and play in the spaces provided. Numbers in the bidding squares are for successive rounds. Check your results with tomorrow's answer. To play "Solitaire": Record the bids you think each hand would make in the bidding squares. After the final declaration has been made start the play, leading from the hand at declarer's left. As you play each card, cross it off of the diagram and record it in the proper square, as S, 3, H. K., etc. In the last column indicate the hand which won the round and lead from that hand on the next round.

SOMETHING OUGHT TO BE DONE ABOUT THIS

Makes Good Pupils of Bad Ones.

Cash contributions to the Hungry School Children's Fund will be received at the following Tribune offices: 1 South Dearborn street, 1101 East 63d street, and 4132 West Madison street.

Cash won't buy good conduct, but Principal David Cole of the Tennyson Elementary school, 2800 West Fulton street, affirmed yesterday that the outlay of less than $15 had resulted in a noticeably higher morale in the institution under his direction. The $14.84 that was spent was used to buy free lunches.

"From the opening of the fall term it was a major problem that confronted us in the number of students we found coming to school without any food at all," Mr. Cole stated yesterday. "Teachers reported to me that many children in their classes were restive, unruly, and irresponsible, especially in the afternoon. In former years I always prided myself that Tennyson school had an especially good morale, but it seemed to be disintegrating.

"We laid the matter before a group of friends of the school, some political, some church people, some fraternal organizations. I was amazed at the way they took off their coats, rolled up their sleeves, and started to produce the aid we needed. They gave cash, and groceries, companies presenting us with bakery goods and housewives showering us with canned goods and jellies. It was necessary last month to spend only $14.84 in cash, but the tone of the school improved out of all proportion to that sum.

"For example, there was Aaron, who had been especially obstreperous. His teacher started an informal discussion one day about health, asking the children what they had for lunch. Aaron, she discovered, had had only two crackers that day, and usually fared no better. The boy has been on the free lunch list ever since, and his deportment is almost irreproachable."

More than 90 per cent of the pupils in Tennyson school are colored. Many a pathetic tale has reached the ears of Principal Cole in the last few months, but none more appealing than that of a white haired Negro whose daughter died recently and left him with a family of six orphans to raise.

"He came in here to beg me for help," Mrs. Cole relates. "'Mistah Principal,' he said to me, 'I thought I was done raising a family. But my daughter came up from Albany, Ga., to visit me, and died, and now I have all her six children to feed. I never asked for help before, but I haven't been able to get a job for nearly two years. Do you suppose those children could get some meals here?'

"We took on the six children for a good lunch at noon, but so far we haven't been able to help their grandfather get employment. He's a fine worker, and had been a watchman with first class references. He registered here at the time the poll of the unemployed was taken, but nothing developed."

Tennyson school is one of those that have applied for help from the Hungry School Children's Aid, which is being raised by THE TRIBUNE.

PARIS FASHIONS ADD NEW COLORS; ONE IS GUARDSMAN BLUE

They feature guardsman blue and a deep red, but tend to modify the brilliant shades of early fall. Rust, brown, and navy are favored for the new short jacket and bolero suits.

Chicago Relief Fund Gains Over $100,000

Total Now Exceeds Three and Half Millions.

Additional contributions from corporations last night brought the joint emergency relief fund up to $3,583,763. The new gifts during the day totaled more than $100,000. They were announced by Samuel Insull Jr., chairman of the campaign which is seeking to raise $3,900,000 for the relief this winter for the poor and unemployed in Chicago.

General Cigar Co.	4,000
Libby, McNeil & Libby	9,000
Consumers Co.	5,000
Schuyler, Dunbar & Adams	3,000
Cutting, Moore & Sadler	10,000
Bartlett-Frazier Co.	2,500
Utility Securities Co.	5,000
Florsheim Shoe Co.	5,000
Dearborn Chemical Co.	5,000
Aermotor Co.	5,000
Kraft-Phenix Cheese Corp.	10,000
Western Shade Co.	2,000
Associated Tel. & Tel. Co.	5,000
Illinois Power & Light Co.	5,000
North. Amer. Light & Power Co.	5,000

Total	$105,130

The second semi-weekly report to be made this afternoon by the trades industries and professional divisions is expected to include some large contributions and officials of the drive hoped that $4,400,000 would be subscribed by marking the half way point in the campaign.

The festivities of the annual formal ball of the American Admirers of German Art in the Steuben building will be halted at 11 o'clock tonight for a few minutes while Charles P. Megan, president of the Chicago Bar association, discusses the relief campaign.

State Normal University 75 Years Old This Fall

Seventy-five years of work as a State Normal school will be recalled at Normal, Ill., as thousands of Illinois State Normal university alumni return on Oct. 30, 31, and Nov. 1.

Seventy-five years ago this fall the school opened its doors in old Major's hall in Bloomington, pending the completion of the new building in North Bloomington. From the one "main" building of the early 60's it has now on its campus eight university buildings, a modern heating plant, and is now constructing a greenhouse.

Utah Co-eds Are Urged to Share Cost of Dates

Salt Lake City, Utah, Oct. 23.—(AP)—Co-eds at the University of Utah were told today by President George Thomas that they should share in the cost of "dates." He added the cost of school social functions must be reduced, or some of the affairs will be abolished. He mentioned the junior prom and the military dance as "entirely too expensive for many students to attend."

Preacher Warns Methodists of Curb on Stage

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Representatives of the Methodist church from all quarters of the world were told today that danger lies in extremely rigid censorship of the theaters.

Addressing the denomination's ecumenical conference on the subject, "The Press and Motion Pictures as International Factors," the Rev. Thomas Tiplady of the Wesleyan Methodist church of Great Britain, said, although a certain amount of censorship was necessary, the danger of too much should be recognized.

"Let us not make the mistake the Puritans made when they closed the theaters," he added. "Let us, rather, educate the people. Public opinion is the final censorship."

He predicted that all churches 25 years from now will have motion picture apparatus and that noted pastors will address millions through talking pictures.

He also suggested the establishment of a national daily Methodist newspaper as a means of representing adequately church sentiment on current problems.

The conference was also told that unless the church refuses to support nations which want to go to war before seeking arbitration, "war will never be swept off the earth."

"This policy," said the Rev. E. C. Urwin of the United Methodist church of Great Britain, "may result in conflicts between church and government, but in the end it will bring about world peace."

A somewhat similar note was sounded by Chancellor C. W. Flint of Syracuse university. He said Christian citizenship begins in the home and ends only in the family of nations. "Christianity," he added, "cannot admit one standard between individuals and a lower one between nations."

A committee report to come before the convention tomorrow read:

"Every Methodist should examine his conscience in the spirit of Jesus to decide the Christian attitude regarding participation in another war, believing as we do that national laws should not deny citizenship to any citizen or applicant for citizenship on the grounds of conscientious objections to war."

The report was written by Elmer Kidney of the Methodist Episcopal church, a resident of Pittsburgh.

Request is also contained in the report that Methodism ask all the principal governments of the world to call an international conference in an effort to establish a new standard of money values and clarify the tariff situation.

A "radical program" of disarmament by mutual agreement, codification of international laws, uniform marriage laws, some form of social control for concentrated wealth, and a more equitable distribution of the world's monetary resources, and the establishment of a permanent ecumenical committee to investigate and report on social conditions were some of the proposals contained in the report.

Alcoholism was denounced and Methodism urged to work for better child labor laws.

De Paul Paper Dance.

FARM AND GARDEN

TREES INSTEAD OF LOSSES.

Rough, unprofitable land can well be put back into potential timberland on many of the farms in Illinois, as well as other states in present times when more of the land than for some time is "marginal" or less as regards profits. Such land can be profitably reforested with the proper trees at a cost which is not excessive, according to L. E. Sawyer, forestry extension specialist of the University of Illinois college of agriculture and the Illinois state natural history survey.

For timber production, he finds, spacing can be about eight feet apart in rows about that same distance apart, or about 680 trees an acre. For fence post production the distance apart is reduced to six feet which means that about 1,200 trees can be set out on an acre.

Christmas trees for future marketing can be planted with only four feet of space, or requiring about 2,700 young trees for an acre. In planting a windbreak, single rows should be set out with eight foot spacing and where a double row is contemplated, the spacing should again be eight feet but there should be 10 feet between the rows.

Cover and food for wild life provide further incentive for such plantings. Recreational areas, a future permanent supply of timber for Illinois and prevention of soil erosion and conservation of water supply and the regulation of stream flow are other advantages to be derived by farmers and other landowners from a tree planting venture, the natural history survey reports.

Miss Garrigue Gallagher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Gallagher, and Miss Polly Hart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Eight Opera Stars Arrive for Season That Starts Nov. 2

It won't be long now. Eight stars of the Chicago Civic Opera arrived in the city yesterday for rehearsals in preparation for the opening of the season Monday, Nov. 2. Among them was one newcomer to Chicago, Sergio Benoni, a young giant from Poland who stands six feet three in his opera tights and who sings bass.

On the Century yesterday morning, besides Benoni, were Rene Maison and Octave Dua, tenors; Jean Vieuille, baritone, and Eduard Cotreuil, basso. On the Broadway was Cesare Formichi and his wife, who arrived in time to celebrate their first wedding anniversary in Chicago. They were married here one year ago today. Arriving by automobile was Maria Olszewska, who landed in New York a fortnight ago and who has been finding out what America looks like to a vacationist. And last, but not least, was Chicago's own contralto, Coe Glade, who has been busy with concerts since early September.

All of the arriving men were aboard the Ile de France with Premier Laval. They describe him as the most democratic of men. All took part in the ship's concert for the benefit of marine charities at which the French premier was an interested listener.

Only a few artists are still to reach Chicago. Two arrivals of today will be John Charles Thomas and Cyrena Van Gordon, American singers who appeared Thursday evening in the opening performance of the Philadelphia season, "Tannhaeuser." Vann-Marcoux, the great French singing actor, is on the Century speeding toward Chicago this morning. Tomorrow morning the new Polish tenor, Jan Kiepura, will arrive on the Century. Monday will see Claudia Muzio "home again" in Chicago from her vacation in Italy and ready to rehearse for the opening performance of Puccini's "La Tosca."

Food Talk.

When is an entrée not an entrée? When it's the whole meal. And the whole meal it is, as warm days take flight, and our luncheons of a salad or a sandwich are abandoned for hot dishes and heartier fare.

Entrée is the word the French gave us on a French menu it means a dish served early in the meal to incite further appetite, or sometimes a bit of food served between the regular courses. To the English an entrée may mean just a side dish, but to us Americans it generally means the principal course of a light meal. For the principal course of a heavy meal we use another French term in its correct interpretation, which is pièce de résistance.

Combined with muffins and a complementary salad, today's luncheon entrée makes a well balanced meal, and is deliciously good and frankly appropriate for an autumn luncheon.

FRIED STUFFED EGGS.

You may serve one or two eggs to a person, depending on the keenness of appetites. Boil as many eggs as you need. Slow boiling for a longer period of time is preferred to fast boiling. Plunge the eggs in cold water when done and peel. Cut in halves and take out the yolks. Mash the yolks; season with salt, pepper, and a little chile sauce. Fill the cavities, and press the halves together. Roll the whole eggs in bread crumbs and fry in deep, hot fat. Serve on rounds of toast, and cover with hot tomato sauce.

PICKLED BEAN SALAD.

Prepare string beans for cooking. Put in boiling water and cook until tender. Drain and pour over them, while hot, a sweet spiced vinegar and bring to a boil. Let the beans stand in the vinegar until ready to serve. Drain and serve on lettuce as a salad with your favorite dressing, or as a relish.

RAISIN PUFFS.

2 teaspoons of sugar
2 eggs
1 cup of milk
2 cups of flour
3 teaspoons of baking powder
1 cup of chopped raisins

Cream the butter; add the sugar, and cream together. Add the well beaten eggs to the mixture. Sift the baking powder and raisins with the flour. Add the milk, and then the flour to the sugar mixture. Steam for thirty minutes in greased baking cups. Serve with a liquid sauce—vanilla sauce is good.

CREAM OF CARROT SOUP.

Scrape and cut two large carrots into thin slices. Boil until tender, adding a little salt to the water when almost done. Press them through a sieve. Put one quart of milk, a slice of onion and a bay leaf in a double boiler. Melt two tablespoons of butter and blend well with two tablespoons of flour. Add to the milk in the double boiler. Remove at this time the onion and the bay leaf. Add the mashed carrot to the milk; season with pepper and salt, and just before serving add one-half cupful of hot cream.

Mysterious Attitude of Six Months' Friend Piques Girl's Wonder

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"About six months ago, at a dance, I was introduced to a man about my own age who appealed to me at the time and has since generated quite a feeling of admiration within me. Did you ever meet a man whose conduct was so perfect that it actually irked you?

"This young man has entertained me not less than once every week since we met, and each occasion has been—for me, at least—most enjoyable. He doesn't say much, but I suppose he must like my company or he'd stop calling.

"The trouble is that he is absolutely impersonal at all times. Never for an instant does he relax this attitude. He is a good conversationalist; likes plays, books, games, and can discuss them in an intelligent manner. But his conversation never once has touched on anything personal. He dresses immaculately, and I have more than once complimented him (without gushing) on his neat appearance. But do you think he ever takes notice of my own appearance? At any rate, he has never mentioned it.

"I live at home and am permitted to use my salary—thirty-two fifty a week—for clothes or anything else I like. I have saved regularly. But since I met the gentleman in question I have spent more for clothes than I did before, principally because I like to look well when he takes me out, and also because he always goes to the best places.

"All I know about him is that he is connected with a La Salle street bank and lives at a large hotel on the north side. Also, he is a member of a fine golf club, where he took me one night to a dinner-dance. Every one seemed to know him. He introduced me to several young men and women whose names I sometimes see in the society columns. Usually when I've been to a lovely affair of any sort I've enjoyed talking about it afterward, on the way home. But as soon as we left the clubhouse my friend seemed to forget the whole affair and talked of something else.

"The man has never even touched my hand! I don't know whether he has a mother, or a father, or brothers, or sisters, and can't seem to ask. Of course, he's been to our house, but he wants me to be quite ready to leave at the appointed time, and so has had little time to talk with my relatives. They like him, but think it's awfully odd he never stays more than a moment, but takes me right off to wherever we are going.

"Once I did invite him to the house for dinner when he asked me out one evening, but when he asked me if I wouldn't prefer to dine with him at the Villa Venice I couldn't resist.

"I like the man. Would like him to hold my hand, squeeze it just a bit, or even kiss me. All the other boys I've been out with—and they were usually pretty nice chaps—have been a teeny-weeny bit intimate, and I—er, one likes it, within reason. But this aloof young fellow certainly tantalizes me.

"Have you ever heard of anything like it? C. W."

An odd bird, to say the least. But then he may be all right. Only it would seem the better part of wisdom to find out if there's a wife anywhere in the background. That reticence about self and family has its suspicious side.

PATTERNS BY CLOTILDE

[Registered U. S. Patent Office.]

WOMAN'S DRESS.

This smart dress will answer many needs for fall and winter wear, and the slimming lines are kind to the mature figure. The deep cross-over vest and the softly falling jabot both contribute towards a slender effect. The yoke of the skirt is cut so as to narrow the hipline, and coming to a point as it does, is length giving. Crêpe satin in black is smart, and so are the lovely new sheer woolens.

The pattern, 3038, comes in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, and 48 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4 yards of 39 inch material with ¾ yard of 39 inch contrasting and ¾ yard of 39 inch all over lace.

THERE'S CORRECT WAY TO MAKE CHILDREN CAREFUL OF THINGS

By GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

One of the few irate letters that I have received came in a few days ago. Even the handwriting was angry! A brief extract is:

"You would let children touch everything, and handle everything. And then they will get so that they won't know which is theirs and which is somebody else's. Children brought up like that learn to steal. That's why our prisons are full." And so on, and so on.

It doesn't merit an answer, but as the matter of fact, the children with the keenest sense of "mine" and "thine" that I have known have been those who were brought up with the fewest possible number of "don't touches" and without any slaps of the hands.

There is nothing that makes a child more careful, more deft, less destructive and more respectful of the property rights of others than a wisely given freedom to touch and handle what is in his home I have seen it again and again, and have put the principle into practice successfully myself.

Of course there are some things about a house a child can't be allowed to handle. There are many things he can't use. There are lots of things he can't play with. All that he must learn. But there is this: That often when he wants a thing or cries for an object it is only that he wants his hands to finish what his eyes alone cannot do—acquaint him with its strangeness. He often only wants to touch it, to feel its surface, to sense its heaviness or lightness—not to keep it or play with it.

This home world is his first field of adventure. All these objects are new to him. They have to be investigated. As a rule he will be satisfied when he cannot play with a thing, if he is allowed to hold it and feel of it.

It is the child who is constantly denied who wants everything he sees. He is the one whom it is a torment to take calling, not the child who has learned through touching. The very little boy and girl who are given the intelligent freedom of their home development of their senses.

Three children in three different families that I think of at the moment, were given this kind of freedom, with their parents' important personal material within reach all the time—and there was never a drawing touched, a piece of manuscript meddled with, nor a brushful of paint nor a pencil used on a wall or piece of furniture. There's a way to do these things.

If you need some guidance in this direction you might find it in our leaflet, "Don't Touch—How Not to Say It," which will be sent on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Telltale Wrinkles Are Much Easier to Prevent than Cure

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

If we were as familiar with the great wrinkle remedy as we are with the great freckle one—namely, prevention—what a lot of agonized groans would be spared the world! Women do groan when they get a closeup on the deeply etched lines. I don't know what, if anything, stirs up more groans.

But you can't make the majority see that prevention is the way out of wrinkle blues. You can't get the average woman to give daily ten minute facial performances until the lines are seen.

But why nag, sez you! And why, sez I!

If they're there, they are to be kneaded, pinched, slapped, and smoothed out. Get the circulation moving. It's good circulation that nourishes those facial tissues and cushions your skin with adipose. The creams attend to the outside needs, the circulation starting to the inside ones.

Whoever said that "wrinkles are a sign of neglected skin," said something. It may not be true in every case. But it is true in so many cases that the rule must stand.

First come the crêpe lines around the lids and at the outer eye corners. Crow's feet. See if eyestrain is causing them to deepen. Apply a rich cream and manipulate the muscles around the eyes. If there are perpendicular furrows between the eyes you can be pretty sure it is due to eyestrain or to a frowning habit. Both conditions are corrective.

If it is the mouth corners that are going "furrowy," concentrate cream and massage movements about the mouth. Don't work in a round and round movement. Work upwards and out across the cheeks. Whistle and blow at your imaginary thistledown. Do a bit of gum chewing when nobody is looking. Good, wide chews, as if you dared the world to call you a vulgarian.

Paris Is Fashioning Newer Millinery Modes

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—While America is getting all hot and bothered about the Empress Eugénie hat, Paris is going ahead to other, newer millinery modes. The trailing ostrich feather is not a sign of universal chic, and is, in fact, worn here chiefly for late afternoon and evening.

The second sketch shows a radically different hat, being worn by some very smart Parisiennes. In fact, this hat is adorning the chic head of the Marquise Sommi-Piccinardi these brisk fall days. It is inspired by the flat, Spanish headgear of the bull ring, and is made with a soup plate crown of red crocheted chenille. A brim that is like a rubber tube in shape is made also of chenille. The quill that stands up in back is red like the hat.

At the bottom of the sketch is Agnès' new sports cap, made of velvet and slightly reminiscent of the caps that used to adorn the heads of English sporting gentry. There is a big flap, making a sort of bill over the forehead in front, and another falling over the neck in back. These flaps are caught under an ostrich pom-pom at the top of the head.

Children Lack Clothing.

"I have been out of work for several months so I am not able to buy my five children the clothing they need. Can you help me get warm things for them? The boys are 12, 9, and 6, and the girls are 10 and 1.

"J. D."

The problem of clothing for the children is one that's worrying a great many parents just now. Won't you relieve their minds and provide some comfort for the children by giving any warm garments your boys and girls have outgrown?

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Vice President Curtis left today for Atlanta to attend the Ecumenical conference to be held there for Methodist clergymen from all over the world. He will return Monday. His daughter, Mrs. Webster Knight III. of Providence, R. I., arrived today to spend a week with her father and her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Gann.

There were 1,400 invitations issued for the reception of the French ambassador and Mme. Claudel tonight at the Mayflower, with almost that many requests from those left off the list. The hosts received the guests in the Chinese room of the hotel, assisted by Marshal Petain and the members of his party, who had been entertained at dinner previously by the Institut Français de Washington.

The German ambassador and Frau von Prittwitz und Gaffron gave a dinner party tonight in honor of Maj. Fritz von Steuben and Frau von Steuben, who came here from Yorktown. They all went to the French reception later.

Preachers to Seek to Interest Youths in Work of Churches

A broad program of religious appeal to youth will be started on Monday at a union meeting of all Protestant ministers at the Central Y. M. C. A. auditorium. The campaign is sponsored by the Chicago council of religious education.

Dr. Harold W. Beales, Cambridge, England, credited with having started a youth movement at Oxford, and Dr. Albert Buckner Coe, pastor of the First Congregational church, Oak Park, will be among the speakers. At the meeting will be launched an attempt to expand week day church schools, while another subject will be broadening the activities of young people's clubs and classes in the churches.

One of the high lights in the campaign will be the young people's night on Nov. 9 preceding the opening of the sixteenth annual good will congress at the Palmer house.

ROBINSON OUT; CAREY TO MANAGE ROBINS

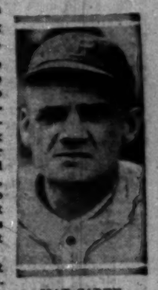
DIRECTORS END ROBBY'S 18 YEAR REIGN OVER CLUB

Ex-Pirate Star Gets One Term Contract.

New York, Oct. 3.—[Special.]—The end of the régime of Wilbert Robinson in Brooklyn baseball — dating from 1913—came today when the directors of the Brooklyn club voted unanimously for the appointment of Max Carey, former Pittsburgh and Brooklyn player, as manager of the Robins for next season. Carey was given a contract for one year.



MAX CAREY.

The retirement of Robinson, winner of two National league pennants, as Brooklyn leader, had been forecast frequently during recent years, but it was not until today that an agreement was reached by the club's directorate to end Robinson's varied career.

The directors met in the club offices at Ebbet's field and decided on Carey's appointment. Carey was called into the meeting, and accepted. A telegram notifying Robinson of the action was dispatched to him at his winter home in Domer Hall, Ga. It was understood the directors voted Robinson a $10,000 bonus.

Carey left tonight for his home in St. Louis, planning to return in about two weeks to begin operations for next season's campaign. The directors, Frank H. York, Stephen McKeever, Joseph Gillaudeau, Harry Dermott, and Walter Carter, said they believed their action was for the best interests of the Brooklyn club.

Robinson, who is 64 years old, began his baseball career in 1896 and continued with the exception of a seven year interlude between 1903 and 1911 down to the present. He served in almost every capacity except umpire. He was first a catcher with the Baltimore Orioles, baseball's dominant organization in the '90s. When his playing days were over he was in business in Baltimore until 1911, when he joined the Giants as scout and coach of pitchers.

Long a Target for Fans.

With Brooklyn he rose to the club presidency, though never relinquishing his management of the team. A serious illness in the winter of 1922-23 threatened to abbreviate his term of active service, but after two major operations he made an excellent recovery and continued as manager of the Robins, narrowly missing winning the pennant in 1924.

Since then adverse years in Brooklyn baseball affairs have made him the target of the fans' displeasure, but the divided state of the club directorate since the death of Charles H. Ebbets, former owner of the Brooklyn franchise, prevented any united action to dispose of him until today.

The appointment of Carey to succeed Robinson is in line with the trend of baseball back toward "inside play," featuring daring base runnings. Carey in the prime of his playing career was rated second only to Ty Cobb as a place hitter and in base running.

Starting with the 1913 season, Carey led the National league base runners in ten of the ensuing 13 years, missing only in 1914, 1919, and 1921. His best year was in 1916 when he stole 63 bases.

Hero of 1925 Series.

Carey achieved his greatest prominence in the 1925 world's series when his hitting, base running, and defensive play was the outstanding feature in the Pirates' victory over Washington. Carey made eleven hits, falling one short of tying the world's series record for hits by one player in one series.

His baseball name, Max Carey, is a reduced version of Maximilian Carnarius, his real name, under which he matriculated at Concordia college, Maine, as a student preparing for the Lutheran ministry.

He is a native of Terre Haute, Ind., and during college vacations he played professional baseball with the South Bend team of the Central league. In 1911, at the age of 21, he joined the Pittsburgh Pirates to begin a major league career which ended, as far as playing is concerned, at the close of the 1929 season.

A shakeup of the Pirates brought Carey to Brooklyn as a player in August, 1926. He was released by the Robins in 1929 and acted as a coach with the Pirates last year. This year he has been out of baseball, engaged in business in St. Louis.

Coach [Harlham]. Umpire [Wisconsin]. Field Judge— [Illinois]. Head linesman [Illinois].

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 23.—Coach Dick Hanley of Northwestern has been a little slow about getting around to his own football league, but he's going to have plenty of action in his 1931 Big Ten bow against the Buckeyes here tomorrow afternoon.

The Ohio State bunch feels that the Wildcats have become calloused to the perpetual sobbing of their football professor and may be overconfident, despite Coach Dick Hanley's blue symphonies, which currently are based on injuries and the fate of Michigan and Purdue, not lasting in games a week ago.

This Is Game's Goal.

As far as the psychology of things is concerned, both squads have one thought in common and that is that the Big Ten championship will be decided here tomorrow, this despite the fact that there still are six Big Ten teams undefeated in the league.

Partisans on both sides feel that the team which wins tomorrow should have a comparatively easy time going through the remainder of the schedule without defeat. On the face of things as they now stand, Northwestern would have an easier path to the championship after tomorrow than Ohio State, due to the presence of Minnesota on the Scarlet and Gray schedule.

After tomorrow the Buckeyes must play Indiana, Wisconsin, and Illinois. The future foes of the Wildcats are Purdue, Minnesota, Indiana, and Illinois.

The Purple has it figured out that the Wildcats will win tomorrow, and will keep on winning through the remainder of the schedule patiently will wait for Ohio State to lick Wisconsin. By that time all other threats in the conference will be out through the exigencies of schedules and Northwestern will be one of the rare outfits to enjoy a undefeated Big Ten title.

Buckeyes in Dual Rôle.

As the whole plot all is very simple, Ohio State holding the key—as they tomorrow and heroes at the Wisconsin homecoming in Madison on Nov. 14.

The only trouble with the scenario is tied with the script for tomorrow's contest. That's why 50,000 folks will be at Ohio stadium at 2 o'clock [Chicago time], firm in the belief they are watching the game for the Big Ten championship.

Coach Williaman has expressed himself as being highly skeptical about Buckeye claims that they have carried a hospital ward down here in lieu of their young athletes. The Buckeyes went to see all the talented Wildcats in action except Reb Russell, although the program man has conceded that Russell will start at full back instead of Rentner.

Williaman Wary of Hanley.

Coach Williaman simply said: "I have known Dick Hanley for a long time and I have warned my players not to take his clinic reports too seriously. We know how tough the Wildcats are and we know we've got to whip them both barrels to win tomorrow."

Coach Hanley backed up his caution by taking his entire squad out to Ohio stadium this afternoon for a light workout under the conditions they will face tomorrow. They performed on the regular gridiron during the same hours the game will be played, to accustom themselves to the lights and shadows of the big horseshoe.

Because the game is looked upon as the ultimate in "crucial" affairs, it is expected that both teams may become very aggressive, to use a polite word. In this connection the existence of calm and scientific playing under the rules of the book have assumed satisfaction that Frank Birch is to referee. Mr. Birch has a reputation of understanding young men who play with great zeal and looked upon to see that no eyes are gouged out unnecessarily.

THE GUMPS—O, FUDGE!

I DON'T LIKE THE WAY HEAVENEYES ACTED WHEN I MENTIONED TOM CARR'S NAME- AND I'M TIRED OF WAITING FOR HER TO DECIDE WHEN WE ARE TO BE MARRIED- TONIGHT WHEN I CALL ON HER IT WILL BE IN A STRICTLY BUSINESS LIKE WAY- I'M A BUSINESS MAN- AND I'LL SETTLE THIS QUESTION AS A BUSINESS MAN SHOULD-
THERE WILL BE NO IF'S AND ANDS ABOUT IT THIS TIME- SHE'LL ANSWER YES OR NO- NO BILLY DALLYING OR BEATING AROUND THE BUSH- I'LL HANDLE HER WITH A FIRM HAND-
NOW HENRIETTA- I'M BEGINNING TO GET A LITTLE IMPATIENT AND A BIT PEEVED AT THE WAY YOU CONTINUE TO POSTPONE ANSWERING ME- CONCERNING OUR MARRIAGE- AND TONIGHT I WANT TO HAVE A DEFINITE UNDERSTANDING-
TUT- TUT- THERE YOU GO AGAIN- NOT ANOTHER WORD NOW- JUST LOOK AND SEE WHAT YOUR LITTLE HEAVENEYES HAS FOR YOU- THAT SHE MADE ALL BY HERSELF- A BIG SURPRISE- A PLATE OF FUDGE-
IN THE MEANTIME- STALLING FOR TIME- HOPING EVERY MINUTE TOM WILL CALL AND MAKE UP-
NOW- I WANT YOU TO SIT RIGHT DOWN AND EAT IT ALL UP LIKE A DARLING BOY+ AND TELL YOUR LITTLE HEAVENEYES HOW GOOD IT IS-YUM- YUM- THAT IS GOOD-

Many Doubtful Games.

On tomorrow's football schedule are three conference games which in advance look almost like tossups—those between Northwestern and Ohio, Michigan and Illinois, and Indiana and Chicago. Purdue has a doubtful affair in opening athletic relations with Carnegie Tech. Army, although beaten a point by Harvard, figures a slight shade over Yale. Notre Dame's strength and reserves are expected to encompass Pittsburgh. Plenty of other good contests stud the card.

Elmhurst Beats Shurtleff, 14-6, in Homecoming Game

Elmhurst college celebrated Homecoming day yesterday with a 14 to 6 victory over Shurtleff. A long pass from Smotherman to Kerber put the ball on Shurtleff's six yard line in the second period and Dreuseke plunged over. Dreuseke ran 45 yards from scrimmage in the final period to score the other touchdown. Shurtleff's score came in the fourth period on a long forward pass.

Thistlethwaite Death Is Called Suicide by Poison

Kokomo, Ind., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Dr. E. R. Clarke, coroner of Howard county, today returned a verdict of suicide in the death here Wednesday of Orville Thistlethwaite, 35, a druggist. An examination showed poison had caused death. Thistlethwaite was a brother of Glenn Thistlethwaite, football coach at the University of Wisconsin.

THOMPSON LOSES WELTER TITLE TO LOU BROUILLARD

Fight Decisions

At Franklin, Pa.—Frankie Dejorski beat Mickey Genaro [10].

Boston, Mass., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Lou Brouillard of Danielson, Conn., won the world's welterweight boxing championship from Young Jack Thompson of Chicago in a dull 15 round bout before more than 19,000 spectators here tonight.

On their showing neither could claim championship caliber. Brouillard was the aggressor and floored Thompson twice in the tenth round and twice in the thirteenth. The defeated champion, however, did not open up seriously during any stage of the battle.

Brouillard took the offensive from the outset. He cuffed Thompson with rights to the body and rocked him with lefts to the jaw. Brouillard had an edge in the first three rounds, but entering the sixth it was fairly even.

Jack Claims Foul.

Midway in the sixth round Brouillard caught Thompson with a stinging right. Thompson backed away with his hands on his groin shouting foul. He was escorted to his corner by the referee. After two minutes he was ordered to continue. All of the ringside timers lost track of the time and when the fight was resumed they started from the seventh round.

Brouillard was after Thompson every minute of those last nine rounds. In the tenth he caught Thompson squarely on the chin with a terrific left. Thompson fell in his tracks. He came up after a two count appearing unconscious. He went down again from a right. This time he stayed for a nine count.

Jack in Last Stand.

He was standing in the center of the ring waiting for the bell at the start of the eleventh round. Here he made his last stand as a champion. He flayed his fists at Brouillard's body and chin, but the relentless French-Canadian outmaneuvered the champion and soon had Thompson hanging on.

In desperation during the last two rounds, Thompson, baffled by the crude southpaw style of Brouillard, tried to fight southpaw himself but it was to no avail.

The receipts were estimated at $55,000. Of this Thompson received $25,000 and Brouillard, $2,500.

North Central Loses Full Back for Lake Forest Game

North Central college will be handicapped in its homecoming football game with Lake Forest today at Naperville by the loss of the regular full back, Ira Johnson, whose leg was broken in practice Thursday. Von Wald and Berry, backs, also are injured. These losses are made up in part by the return of Reichenbacher, freshman end from Aurora, Ill.

Johnny Layton Captures South Section Cue Meet

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 23.—(AP)—Johnny Layton of Sedalia, Mo., won the southern sectional pocket billiard tournament, qualifying event for the national tournament, here tonight when he defeated Benny Allen of Kansas City, 100 to 56, in twelve innings. Layton has held both the world three cushion and pocket billiard titles.

Notre Dame, Pittsburgh Fight to Keep Goals Uncrossed

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 23.—If Notre Dame's Irish or Pitt's Panthers shouldn't be ready for work tomorrow afternoon it would be just too bad for one or the other. But both are ready, so the outstanding football battle of the season may be staged in the stadium between two elevens whose goal lines haven't been crossed this season.

CAPT. EDDIE HIRSCHBERG.

It isn't surprising that Notre Dame is the favorite. The fighting Irish—there are two of them on the first string team—are as powerful or more so than last fall. Pitt is about the same as a year ago. And a year ago the South Bend crowd swept into Pittsburgh and threw the Panthers for a 35 to 19 loss. A touchdown on Notre Dame's first play demoralized the Panthers. That probably won't happen tomorrow, but the Irish no doubt will think up a new one.

Regulars to Start.

Although apparently at ease over what he thinks is going to happen, Coach Hunk Anderson isn't going to take any chances. At least that was his attitude as he tapered off with a light signal drill for his squad this evening. He is going to start the regulars and that means Pitt from the outset will face a line that is making a reputation for itself as the best in South Bend history.

The Notre Dame line isn't going to be the only good one in there ready for action when the 2 o'clock starting whistle toots. Starting with Capt. Eddie Hirschberg at left end, the entire Pitt forward wall is a one veteran after another. Ralph Daugherty at center is in his third season. The guards, Morris and Milligan, are lettermen. MacMurdo and Quatse are not strangers in tackle circles. Neither is Rip Collins as an end. The only drawback to this powerful combination is that the Panthers don't have line replacements of the kind that the Irish can rush in when the occasion arises.

Panthers Stocked with Backs.

In the back field, Coach Sutherland of Pitt has men who might to a certain extent offset some of Notre Dame's edge in line replacements. He owns two sets of fairly skilled backs. He's going to start off with his regular quartet made up of Hogan, Heller, Reider, and Lush. If that combination can't make headway, it may not be long before Sebastian and Metasic are shot in to attempt to awe the South Benders with their left handed passes. There probably will be plenty of passing by Pitt.

Heller is another who will have to be watched as a tosser. Reider is liable to get away any time after the fashion of Schwartz, whose 60 yard run on the first play last fall shattered the Pitt morale.

At the last minute today Sutherland planted Lush in the regular full back rôle, relegating Clark to the second string. Lush is a powerful 200 pounder. As long as he's in there Notre Dame will have to provide a defense for his special variety of threat. When that is being done Pitt may take to the air.

The lineup:

NOTRE DAME.		PITTSBURGH.
Kosky	L. E.	Hirschberg [capt.]
Krause	L. T.	Quatse
Greeney	L. G.	Milligan

Kurth	R. T.	MacMurdo
Mahoney	R. E.	Collins
Murphy	Q. B.	Horan
Schwartz	L. H.	Heller
Sheeketski	R. H.	Reider
Melinkovich	F. B.	Lush

WEST VIRGINIA IS DEFEATED BY DETROIT, 9 TO 7

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 23.—(AP)—University of West Virginia's eleven scored its first touchdown in three years against University of Detroit tonight, but the Titans won, 9 to 7.

Rocky Parsaca, Titan half back, kicked from the Mountaineers' 15 yard line early in the second period to make the score 3 to 0. Then Capt. Boyle of the Mountaineers eluded the Titans on a fake double pass and skirted right end for a 45 yard sprint and a touchdown. Sortet place-kicked the extra point.

In the same period a Mountaineer punt was blocked by Hess, substitute for Coening, who fell on the ball over the goal for the last score of the game.

Koken vs. Reider: Private Battle as Pitt Faces Irish

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 23.—Mike Koken sounds is if it might be German for some kind of new fangled coffee cake. It is just the name of another Notre Dame half back—not a regular, but a member of the shock troops who either wear out the enemy and make it easy for the regulars or are rushed into action when it is found that the regulars need help.

Koken, a short, wiry, shifty kid, has been around for a couple of years now, taking knocks and bruises in return for an occasional workout in a regular game. He hasn't complained any about that. But there's a game here tomorrow with Pitt and that's one affair that Koken wants to get into for more than a few minutes. He probably will.

The reason for the Pitt combat being out of the ordinary from Koken's viewpoint is that among the Panthers is listed his pet athletic enemy. The enemy is Paul Reider, right half back. They started their little personal row in high school.

Mike was at South High in Youngstown, O., and Reider at Newcastle, Pa., in 1928. Youngstown beat Newcastle, 7 to 6, the two touchdowns being scored by Koken and Reider. They met that winter in basketball and Youngstown won again, 18 to 17. Koken scored 9 points and Reider 12. Their rivalry continued last year, when each scored in the Pitt-Notre Dame grid fight.

When Mike gets in there tomorrow Pitt will have to watch him. He can run with the ball and that isn't all. He's a real triple threat man and there are those who say that if he had the experience of Marchmont Schwartz, the first string left half, he'd be every bit as good.

CARNERA AGREES TO CHICAGO BOUT WITH UZCUDUN

New York, Oct. 23.—(AP)—Leon See, manager of Primo Carnera, announced tonight he had agreed with Nate Lewis, Chicago promoter, in a telephone conversation, to hold the Carnera-Paulino Uzcudun heavyweight fight at the Chicago Stadium Nov. 17.

When the proposed meeting was banned by the New York state athletic commission several cities made offers. The Chicago bid of a $40,000 guarantee for the two fighters with a privilege of taking a percentage of the gate receipts was the best, See said.

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 23.—Michigan's football eleven will be guests of the Illini in the seventeenth contest between the two elevens before an expected homecoming crowd of 30,000 persons. Whether the Wolverines are offensive or defensive guards will be determined, beginning at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in Memorial stadium.

In this stadium, dedicated to Illinois students who fell in the world war, great elevens of other years have met. In fact, Illinois men will never tire of telling Michigan men, and Michigan men never will cease being bored with listening to that story of how Red Grange ran wild through the Wolverines of 1924 for four touchdowns in the first period.

Only One Real Veteran.

This recollection is complementary to a homecoming occasion, for the fighting Illini of 1931, still fighting Illini, will do no such thing in this seventeenth battle of the interuniversity rivalry.

In fact, the eight sophomores and three veterans, only one of whom is a real veteran, will be what is known as underdogs against a Wolverine squad which, Illinois scouts reported, was a better team than it showed against Ohio State a week ago.

Despite this doubtful but not entirely dismal outlook, Illini hope rather than expect to play the part of inhospitable hosts to the Wolverines. They anticipate no parade of blue jerseyed Wolverines down the whitewashed lines to the ultimate line where touchdowns are scored, unless a passing attack catches unawares and overwhelms a secondary none too sure in defense against aerial plays.

Illini Attack Weak.

That Illinois will be able to gain unless by an open field run or by passes is still more doubtful. As yet the Illini have not learned to charge fast enough to open holes for the backs. Attack gauged by later season standards is weak. That is, it now looks weak. Perhaps tomorrow will tell a different story.

As Coach Zuppke planned his starting lineup tonight there are six sophomores in the line from end to end. It may be seven if Hyink, tackle, who has been absent from practice all week owing to a death in the family, is thought to be familiar enough with signals to take his regular place. At some stage of the contest he will be in there. Berry of last year's squad will call signals in the rôle of quarter back.

Wolverines Arrive Today.

Illinois knows not whether to be complimented or chagrined by the fact Michigan's hosts remained in Chicago over night and will make a daylight ride, arriving shortly before game time. They prefer to think the Wolverines chose Chicago accommodations in preference to a cold country club and are not holding the Illini cheaply.

Coach Zuppke took his squad to the Champaign Country club to spend the night away from the advance homecoming activities. There the players engaged in final signal drill and dummy defense against Michigan plays as presented by the freshmen.

Badgers Made Choice to Beat Penn Today

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 23.—Still fizzing with pleasure and astonishment one week after their unexpected victory over Purdue, the University of Wisconsin football team takes the field against Pennsylvania tomorrow afternoon in Wisconsin's first invasion of the east since the 1899 team lost to Yale.

Penn's team isn't very good this year, the whole football administration and the coaching system having been revised since last fall, and the gambling odds which are wired to bookmakers all over the country by a national pricemaker in Fort Worth, Tex., hold Wisconsin at 8 to 5.

The Wisconsin boys may be in the position of the unfortunate little tailor who accidentally tipped a 2 pound stone crock off a balcony rail in a music hall and knocked out John L. Sullivan, who was sitting below. For weeks after that friends and neighbors were lying for the little tailor and heaving punches at him to knock out the man who had knocked out John L. Sullivan.

Just Playing for Fun.

Penn, however, probably is not team enough to whip the team that whipped Purdue, because, as the story of the new system and the new football spirit goes, the boys are just college boys playing the game for fun this year. They did not start practice until Sept. 14, their attack is limited, their line is weak on defense, they are green hands at the so-called Warner system, whereas Wisconsin has a team of veterans playing a familiar game.

The preposterous idea that football is just a game to be played for fun has never been successfully argued. Still it was only natural that Penn should swing to this extreme because last year football was such a grim and burdensome thing at Penn that some of the players were talking up a strike before the season ended.

Like a Police Shakeup.

They got in a new chief of the university, Thomas S. Gates, a partner in the Morgan firm, as nonsalaried president, and he put in a system which is known as the Gates plan. The athletic council was abolished, sport was placed under the depart-

GREAT GUY, THIS LEWIS—WHILE HE RIDES 3 WINNERS

But He Loses Once and Is Just Another Jockey.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Jockey Melvin Lewis was again the hero at Hawthorne yesterday, but in the Harmony purse, which featured the program, he almost depleted the bank roll of his enthusiastic public.

After winning the first race with Bright Beauty and the third on Maid of Honor, which paid $18.80 for a two dollar ticket, the 16 year old sensation from Colorado climbed into the saddle on Sister Zoe in the Harmony which was a dash at six furlongs engaging the fleetest sprinters at Hawthorne.

The crowd by this time was betting on Lewis and it didn't make any difference what sort of horse he was riding. There came a terrific plunge on Sister Zoe and the odds against her were hammered down. Lewis was up and it didn't worry the players if Sister Zoe doesn't fancy six furlongs. She's a slow beginner and a mile is her favorite distance.

He Doesn't Win This One.

Came the dash at six furlongs and the crowd gasped when Sister Zoe and Lewis ran far back all the way, winding up without any part of the money. Supreme Sweet, from William Schmidt's Superior stable of Chicago, running in her most brilliant form, took the track soon after the beginning and never let another horse get near her.

In the early stages she was a half dozen lengths in front of the pack with Sister Zoe loafing along back with the rear guard. Supreme Sweet kept busily at her task and wound up by beating Brookside five lengths.

Supreme Sweet's effort was the best of the fall season at Hawthorne, as she skipped over the three-quarters of a mile in 1:12 2-5, pretty fast time against the electric clock which began ticking off the split seconds from a standing start.

But He Captures Fifth.

Supreme Sweet had many backers and went to the post as the favorite. She paid $6.96 to win, $4.86 to place, and $3.52 to show. Brookside paid $15.62 to place, and $6.54 to show. Broad Meadows, on which there had been some action, paid $3.90 to show. There were no cheers for the spectacular Lewis when he brought Sister Zoe back to salute the judges.

But while the crowd put the chill on the little fellow at the end of the feature it was right back with him in the fifth and he didn't fail this time. He was aboard the favorite, Fort Dearborn, and his ride to victory was one of the most brilliant Chicagoans have seen this season. He made the pace most of the way, yet saved his horse wherever possible, and dropped back so sharply at the head of the stretch it looked for an instant as if he was beaten. Then he came again on the outside and got up to beat Gold Mint by a length. With the whole crowd betting on Lewis Fort Dearborn paid $5.66.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 23.—The University of Iowa football team, which has not scored in three games this fall, faces the Gophers of Minnesota tomorrow afternoon in Memorial stadium here. Minnesota will celebrate Dad's day and 25,000, half the capacity of the concrete horseshoe, is expected to watch the first Western conference game for the Gopher team.

Iowa's reported weakness on offense has made Minnesota the favorite. However, there are some who believe Iowa's offense has improved, and point to the strength of Notre Dame opponents in support of their claim. Pittsburgh, which has not been scored on by four teams this fall and is rated as a dangerous foe for Notre Dame, defeated Iowa, 20 to 0. Texas Aggies, another strong team, won 20 to 6. The Indiana, rated an unusually strong defensive eleven, was held to a scoreless tie.

Hawks Outplayed Hoosiers.

Iowa has had more than fair success in whipping Minnesota when such a result was least expected. In 1923 they slipped over a 7 to 6 decision. A year later a goal from the field gained a 9 to 7 victory. Suspended from the Big Ten that year, Iowa did not have a place on Minnesota's schedule in 1930.

Coach Burt Ingwersen, 33 Iowa players, trainers and managers arrived at St. Paul this morning from Iowa City. They will remain downtown tonight. However, the squad visited Northrop field this afternoon for a final workout prior to Minnesota's regular 4 o'clock practice.

"We haven't any scoring punch. Our passing attack is handicapped by poor blocking and when we shift a passer, our ends, who are small in stature, are handicapped in reaching for the ball. We do not expect victory, but we do believe tomorrow's game will be close."

Gophers Pass Final Test.

Tonight Coach Crisler gave the Gophers their final gridiron examination. And the players, the majority of whom are first and second year men, demonstrated they know how to stop the Hawkeyes. A more important question which only tomorrow's game will answer is: "Will Minnesota's plays function as designed?"

The team has power. It has superior kicking and fair passing attack. If it lacks, just as a year ago, a star, Munn qualifies as captain by intelligence and ability. But Munn, a guard, cannot direct the team, nor can he. This responsibility will rest first on Pete Somers and later on Ken McDonald.

The Gophers' passes functioned in practice, but the passers, in the lexicon of the gridiron, throw a "heavy" ball. Receivers have difficulty catching their passes, although they are sure hands. As Crisler said today: "Minnesota's passers are throwers and the receivers are catchers."

O'Kelly Boxes Calmes Monday at White City

Jim O'Kelly, Irish heavyweight from Texas, continued training at Brown's gym yesterday for his ten round bout with Baxter Calmes in Promoter Joe Mallor's show at White City Monday night. O'Kelly boxed four rounds with Buck Easterling. Calmes is out at the Arcade, working with Jack Kogan and Willie Oster.

It may seem rather early to be looking for THE TRIBUNE'S Golden Gloves tournament, but it's not too early for Kid Howard, proprietor of the Arcade gym. Just to prove that he intends to keep the team trophy he now has won in last year's Golden Gloves meet, Howard has signed Jack Chavers, Negro star of other years, as his new boxing instructor. He will have a good foundation for his 1932 team in Fred Caserio, Nick Scialaba, and George Goodman, members of the team which won the intercity and international Golden Glove bouts last spring.

One of the principals on the Mastro-Galatino championship card at the Chicago Stadium Nov. 4 was eliminated yesterday with the announcement that Prince Saunders, Chicago colored junior lightweight, will have his tonsils removed within the next few days. Consequently, the Stadium must find an opponent for Kid Kaplan, former featherweight champion, with whom Saunders was matched.

Seven amateur wrestling bouts are to be held at the Medinah Athletic club next Wednesday night. Ray Kessler, Medinah athletic director, aided by Harry Kent, Northwestern university tackle last year, is arranging the program, the first Medinah has conducted.

Joe Battalino of Hartford, Conn., world's featherweight champion, will arrive here Wednesday to begin training for his bout with Earl Mastro at the Stadium Nov. 4. This means that he will remain in Hartford to see his pupil Midget Mike O'Dowd on Armistice night.

Indiana Meets Maroons; It's Crisis for Both

Indiana's football team will seek its second victory in twenty starts against Chicago this afternoon at Stagg field in the only local Big Ten game. The Hoosiers have not defeated Chicago since 1910.

From the standpoint of its effect on the rest of the season the game is a critical one for both teams. Indiana has potential power, but has not been able to defeat either of its major opponents so far. By defeating the already downtrodden Maroons the Hoosiers will gain the confidence they need. Chicago, if it is to get anywhere this season, must win from Indiana, for a defeat would probbaly have a disastrous effect on the Maroon morale.

Maroons Not in Best Shape.

The Maroons are not in the best possible shape for the game. Capt. Sam Horwitz, the one lineman who stands out clearly as an exceptional performer, has not recuperated sufficiently from the elbow injury he received in the Yale game, it developed yesterday. He probably will play only if all the able bodied reserves are used up.

Since Horwitz' first understudy, Bob Shapiro, is also the victim of various aches and bruises, the choice to fill the captain's shoes at guard falls upon Wayne Rapp, converted this week from an end, with Bill Berg another possibility.

The health situation on the Midway is further saddened by the fact that Bernie Wien, regular end, has suffered a renewal of his shoulder sprain. Jack Spearing, only 200 pounder on the team, is still recuperating from a charley horse; Don Birney, half back, has a deep cut on one hand, and Pete Zimmer, regular full back, is still wearing a bandage over the lacerations on his scalp. Despite their impaired efficiency all of these men probably will see some service because of the general weakness of the Maroons in substitute strength.

Just Play a Good Game.

In their light signal drill last night members of the Maroon squad were not talking about victory or defeat. Still smarting from the Yale debacle, their ambition is simply to play a good game and to demonstrate to Coach Stagg that they are better than they looked last Saturday.

With three successive nights of scrimmage, the Chicago coach has driven his men at a furious clip. He is depending upon the flanker play for attack, but has made several changes in it which are designed to quicken the action and add deception.

Both teams will use forward passes liberally, but the Maroons have no tosser who can match Opasik's 60 yard throws. Coach Pat Page of the Maroons, football mentor at Bloomington last year, believes that Fitzhugh Lyons, colored end on Indiana's squad, is one of the best pass receivers in the country and has stressed defense in practice. The Maroons must depend upon their ability to get free men in the open.

The Chicago coach likely will use his entire squad at various times during the game. It appeared yesterday that Bob Wallace may call signals during a part of the game instead of Paul Stagg, who was somewhat slow against Yale. Indiana has two back fields of equal skill, the second containing Ivan Fuqua, who established a new quarter mile record in the national interscholastic track meet at Stagg field two years ago.

Murdering Weasel Endangers Fowl in Chicagoland

BY BOB BECKER.

The homicidal tendencies of weasels in Chicagoland have resulted in the death of many a pheasant and chicken during the last few months, according to reports from several suburbanites. Within a few miles of Chicago's loop we have weasels, skunks, a few badgers, foxes, raccoons, and 'possums, but of this group of interesting furbearers the slim little weasel is the most adroit and ruthless killer.

The Flossmoor weasel tribe seems to be the boldest and most active. G. S. Nicolson, a resident of that suburb, had the experience of watching a weasel chase one of his chickens and grab the bird within three feet of where he was standing. The smart hen, cackling in fright was wise enough to run in the right direction but even that move didn't save her life.

The attack from the weasel came about 2 o'clock in the afternoon when Nicolson was standing in the yard back of his house. Suddenly he saw the hen start for him and behind it, running easily, was the little killer intent upon seizing the chicken. Before the chase ended both weasel and hen were right at his feet. The former sank its teeth into the thigh of the poor hen and Nicolson, only had to take a step to put his foot on the body of the animal and kill it. The chicken was so badly wounded that it had to be killed.

Just a few days ago some pheasants in Flossmoor were victims of a weasel raid. This time the animals slipped into the yard and 82 birds were down and out when the weasel gang got through with the massacre. We have had keepers of game farms tell us of raids by minks and weasels that resulted in the death of close to 200 birds, but this is the worst loss we have heard of close to the loop.

Estate owners north of the loop also have been losing pheasants and other feathered "stock" from predators, including weasels, which look upon a yard full of chickens or pheasants as an invitation to kill. The worst thing about the weasel is his stunt of unnecessary killing. Instead of taking a bird or two to eat these animals kill just for the fun of it.

ment of physical education, spring practice and the old fashioned prize fighters' type of training camps were discontinued, and, finally, for the first time since 1901, a coach was brought in who is not an alumnus of Pennsylvania.

His name is Harvey Harman and he comes from Pitt, so, naturally, he introduced the methods of Glenn Warner who had coached there. These football reforms often resemble periodic shakeups in police departments, but sometimes they do serve to deemphasize or deprofessionalize the game.

Up to now Penn has beaten the neighbors' children from Lehigh, Swarthmore, and Franklin and Marshall mainly with a simple, honest system of pushing the ball along, relieved only by the most cautious essay into fancy strategy. Every team has a few good players and Penn's best apparently are two tackles, Colehower and Sokolis, and a full back of the hurtproof, line-smashing type named Perina. They had a good quartet back, too, by the name of Bill Graupner, but he hurt his knee and Burt Smith, a second string boy, will toll the numbers.

The Wisconsin crowd, 33 players and several coaches and professors, arrived this afternoon and went out to Franklin field in their gold silk pants and red and white jackets just as the Penn junior varsity finished a game with La Salle college, one of those seats of learning which average about one to the block in Philadelphia. They were much surprised to discover the field all chewed up with only a few sprigs of faded grass surviving the traffic of many cleats, and Mr. Labrum of the Penn athletic office explained that was just the best grass they could offer at this time.

Cleats Ruin Grass.

"I reckon that our grass cost, roughly, about $10 a blade to raise," Mr. Labrum said. "We have spent close onto $60,000 trying to raise a stand of grass on this lot. Once we bought the bottom of a river and spread it on, but we didn't even get seaweed. The trouble is that, being right in the heart of a big city, we haven't any special lot for practice and every time a couple of little grasses begin to grow somebody squashes them out with a bunch of cleats either in practice or in some game. But this is very nice ground to fall on. Grass smells nicer, but it isn't any easier on the human frame."

The squad ran signals in three complete teams and beyond that the only work was some practice in throwing and catching passes and kicking for points after theoretical touchdowns.

Most of the Wisconsin players had some part in last year's pushing around of the Penn team in a game that Wisconsin won, 27 to 0, and they had no reason to dread the morrow. The starting lineup probably will be the same that swept Purdue for 21 points in the first quarter.

Wabash Meets Denison in Homecoming Game

Blackhawks Are Erratic in Workout

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—The Chicago Blackhawks hockey regulars of last season today held their first passing and shooting practice on the Duquesne Garden ice since coming here for their annual training season over a week ago.

Some of the best players lacked accuracy in their net shooting. Among these were Tommy Cook, Lolo Couture, and Mush March. Coach Godfrey Matheson and Physical Director Emil Iverson were elated at the physical condition and shooting form of big Earl Miller.

Johnny Gottselig and Doc Romnes displayed mid season form in handling the puck while Taffy Abel, Teddy Graham, and Capt. Cyclone Wentworth broke up many forward rushes.

W. & J. Squad to Be Guests of Purple for Day

Washington, Pa., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—The Washington and Jefferson football squad will be the guests of Northwestern university at Evanston for a day en route to the game with Marquette at Milwaukee on Nov. 7, it was announced today. Northwestern has extended an invitation to the Red and Black to use the Northwestern field for a practice on Nov. 6 and to entertainment that night. The squad will be greeted at Evanston by a committee of Northwestern football officials, headed by Coach Dick Hanley.

Texans Travel 2,100 Miles to Play Harvard

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 23.—(AP)—A confident band of Texas Longhorns, disregarding their 2,100 mile journey to the Harvard stadium and the resulting climatic changes, had high hopes of stopping the greatest team Harvard has developed in a decade today when they ended their brief workout in the stadium.

The Harvard eleven ran through several new plays which have been reserved for tomorrow's game. The Crimson, encouraged by last week's showing against the Army, and regarded as one of the greatest teams in the country, is confident of turning back the invaders in their first intersectional clash.

JOESTING LEADS JACKETS AGAINST BEARS TOMORROW

Coached by Herb Joesting, who also plays full back, the Yellow Jackets of Philadelphia will battle the Bears in a National Pro Football league game tomorrow afternoon at Wrigley field before a Ladies' day crowd for which 20,000 requests for tickets were filed.

The Bears aren't taking much stock in the fact that the Jackets lost to Green Bay last week, for the score was no indication of their strength. The Packer players declared the Jackets gave them the hardest fight of the season and that a break or two in favor of the easterners would have reversed the score.

In addition to Joesting there are five who played on the Minneapolis eleven last year. They are Wally Nydahl, Herman Seborg, Jim Pederson, Leland Wilson, and Nate Barrager. The latter will oppose Bert Pearson at center and their fight for individual honors will be well worth watching. Barrager was all-American in 1929 at the University of Southern California.

Two other Pacific coast stars are in the Philly lineup. Mort Kaer of U. S. C., who signed two years ago but never reported to the New York Giants, will be seen at quarter back for the first time here, while Megs Asplit, another Southern Californian, will be making his debut here as a back.

A preliminary game will be played at 12:30 between the Barrets and Marquette Arrows. Two kid teams, the Teddy Bears and Ramblers, will clash during the intermission of the Bear-Philly combat.

124th Field Artillery Faces Hegewisch Eleven

DON'T GAMBLE WITH WEATHER
. . . USE EVEREADY PRESTONE

Gamblers MUST PAY

THAT car of yours cost you a lot of money. Why gamble this winter with unsafe, old-fashioned anti-freeze mixtures — when you can have complete Eveready Prestone protection for so little?

There's no winter-worry with Eveready Prestone. No wondering whether your anti-freeze has boiled away. No danger of your car freezing some blizzardy night when you are many miles from home. Eveready Prestone safeguards you throughout the winter. It doesn't overheat your motor on warm days, and it flows freely on cold ones. It has less tendency to leak than water. It retards rust and will not damage the finish of your car.

Last year Eveready Prestone safeguarded the cooling-systems of more than a million and a half automobiles. Now it is still further improved.

It is the first product scientifically developed to keep engines from freezing — not a makeshift, intended primarily for some other purpose. Its use on scientific polar expeditions and its acceptance by leading car manufacturers and engineers prove its supreme quality!

Don't be misled into thinking that makeshift products are cheaper. Cost-per-gallon doesn't mean anything, when your anti-freeze boils away and needs constant refilling. The first cost of Eveready Prestone is the last. You put it in and forget it!

Play safe now and have your cooling-system cleaned, tightened and filled with the proper amount of Eveready Prestone. Then you can smile when cold weather comes and other cars start freezing — and gamblers pay their bills!

CHICAGO STOCKS MOVE HIGHER AS WHEAT GOES UP

Commonwealth Edison, U. S. Radio Advance.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

A flourish of strength was shown by stocks on the Chicago board yesterday as a result of the advance made in the commodity markets—particularly wheat. The midday rally in wheat prices was immediately reflected in stock prices both here and in New York.

Trading was largely professional, as indicated in the relatively small volume of transactions, which on the Chicago exchange amounted to 58,000 shares. There was little doubt as to the better sentiment engendered by the strong tone in the commodity markets among the traders. Sponsoring groups were aggressive in bidding up favored issues.

Edison Rallies.

Net gains among the automotive and utility shares in most instances amounted to less than a point, but larger gains were chalked up for a few stocks. After selling off on early trades, Common Wealth Edison recovered to 14⅛ for a net gain of 2 points.

Aggressive support sent United States Radio up for a good gain on a volume of sales which fell just short of 10,000 shares. Following announcement by the president of the company that earnings for the fiscal year ended Sept. 30 would exceed last year National Standard moved up a point, to 25.

Plans Sale of Subsidiary.

Charles R. Frederickson, chairman of the executive committee of the American Colortype company, said yesterday that the company plans the sale of the plant and business of the Thomas D. Murphy company, a subsidiary. The sale is subject to the approval of the board of directors. The move is made in keeping with the company's economy plan of coördinating plant operation. Mr. Frederickson stated. American Colortype will retain the cash and receivables of the Murphy company.

According to current estimates the forthcoming report of Borg-Warner for the first nine months will show earnings in excess of common dividend requirements of 75 cents a share. Inasmuch as the company showed earnings of 77 cents a share in the first half this year the company would fill requirements for the nine months by covering the preferred dividend requirements of $65,800 in the third quarter.

Says I. C. C. Ruling Penalizes Good Rail Management

BY SCRUTATOR.

"A leap in the dark" was the way Commissioner Eastman in July, 1930, described the interstate commerce commission's attempt to boost railroad earnings to 6 per cent by raising rates 25 to 40 per cent.

Congress, having turned the railroads back to their stockholders, stipulated in the transportation act of 1920 that the commission should so adjust rates that the carriers would be able for the ensuing two years to make 6 per cent on their property investment.

The commission decided to raise rates in western territory 40 per cent, in the southern and mountain Pacific regions 25 per cent, in the western territory 35 per cent.

Time Proves Him Right.

"Under present conditions any forecast of traffic and expenses for the next twelve months is largely a leap in the dark," said Commissioner Eastman, although he concurred in the decision.

He was right. Instead of earning 6 per cent in 1921 the railroads of the United States averaged 2.81 per cent. The following year conditions were better, but earnings averaged only 3.54 per cent. In no year since have they been as high as 5 per cent.

In the six years prior to 1920 there had been successive general rate increases of 5 per cent, 15 per cent, and 25 per cent. After 1920 there was such a clamor from shippers about the high cost of transportation that a 10 per cent reduction was ordered.

The commission has always leaped in the dark. There is nothing else that can be done by eleven men attempting to run 26 billion dollars' worth of railroad property by remote control under authority of archaic legislation passed when conditions in the transportation field were entirely different from those existing today.

Sweeping Generalities.

The very magnitude of its task forces it to make decisions in sweeping generalities which can, at best, but poorly approximate a solution to the multitude of complicated situations in railroading that only the traffic man on the job can satisfactorily adjust. It tries to meet problems arising from a wide variety of causes by the application of slide rule theories and out of date statutes.

And the railroads, having learned the futility of attempting to do otherwise, are obliged to adopt the heavy handed methods of the commission when they want to get something done.

When one dose of rate increase fails to provide the carriers with the anticipated earnings, the commission gives the patient a second dose of the same medicine. That failing, another is in order.

Where will this process end? Obviously it cannot continue until consecutive advances have destroyed or diverted all railway tonnage and the last hundred pounds of freight carried by rail pays the entire four billion dollars of operating revenues.

Higher freight rates stimulate diversion to water and highway transportation. This tendency the commission proposes to check by applying to the truck and the barge the same regulatory blight that has devitalized the railroads.

Takes Another Leap.

Industry, which is attempting to maintain a higher standard of living here and at the same time compete in the world's markets through the economies of mass production, is asked to carry on its back the additional burden of higher transportation costs which, in effect, remove inland communities farther from the seaboard and farther from each other.

Now the commission takes another "leap in the dark." It proposes to load rate increases on strong railroads and divide the extra revenues, if any, among the weak.

Financially strong railroads are asked to assume the risk of driving away their own business by raising certain rates without the compensating privilege of retaining the additional revenues that such rate increases might bring in. Whatever extra earnings result are to be given to weak roads that cannot pay their own way.

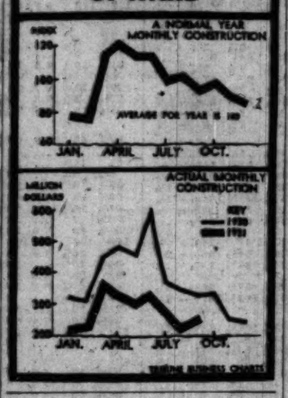
Removes Premium.

The premium on good management thus disappears. What incentive would there be for a strong football team to win or a weak one not to lose if the referee should announce that after the game the loser should be given as a bonus the number of points by which he lost?

Most of the railroads of the country are still in good financial condition, despite the depression and despite the regulative death kiss. The managements of many of them will admit, privately, that they could make good headway without boosting the nation's freight bill if they were allowed to exercise more fully their own good judgment in adapting their operations to changing conditions.

It should be worth trying, at least. Perhaps we are trying to spread the available business over too many railroads. Perhaps we have leaped far enough in the dark.

MONTHLY CONSTRUCTION CONTRACTS TURN UPWARD



CALL STATE CORN GROWERS TO JOIN IN RAISING PRICE

Plan to Store Grain Until Spring.

BY PAUL POTTER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Bloomington, Ill., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—Corn growers of central Illinois, moved by the lowest prices in thirty-one years, are going to climax a series of massmeetings held in recent weeks with a huge gathering in the Coliseum here tomorrow night, which will be open to all farmers, business men, and bankers.

Called by Frank Moberly, president of the McLean County Farm bureau, and with the approval of local banking officials, the meeting is to consider adoption of a plan to finance the holding of as much as 100 million bushels of corn through the winter, stored in farm cribs and granaries throughout the state.

Donald Kirkpatrick, legal counsel for the Illinois Agricultural association, is expected to broach the formation of the stabilizing plan. It is understood he contemplates the organization of a credit corporation, capitalized at $1,000,000, which would be able to loan funds to farmers with warehouse receipts on their sealed in storage corn as collateral. These receipts in turn are negotiable under the state warehousing act of 1927, recently invoked by Gov. Emmerson as a possible aid to corn growers, with the Intermediate Credit Bank of St. Louis.

Get Millions on Credit.

By this plan it is claimed as much as five or eight million dollars in credit may be made available on the new corn crop that is now worth but 22@25 cents a bushel in local bidding. A farmers' meeting in Ottawa earlier in the week was reported to have greeted the suggestion with enthusiasm and several county farm bureau leaders have been urging Earl Smith, president of the Illinois Agricultural association, to take the leadership in putting the plan into force.

Smith declared he had been to Washington to place the plan before the federal farm board, and had secured the approval of the board's coarse grains advisory committee. The board, however, is said to be "setting on the nest" in the matter, and farm leaders here have expressed open resentment against the board for proceeding with a similar plan on cotton without giving an answer to the corn plan.

J. C. Stone, chairman of the farm board, declared in Chicago yesterday that the board had the proposal under consideration, but "hasn't had time to go into the matter thoroughly yet."

Calls Farm Bureau Heads.

Smith is in Springfield today, looking up the status of warehousing inspection and the attitude of the state department of agriculture on its cooperation in perfecting the statewide corn stabilizing plan. He is also understood to have issued a call today to every county farm bureau president in Illinois to attend a closed meeting in Springfield Monday, to determine whether the Illinois Agricultural association should sponsor the credit corporation. He is reported here to have discussed the plan with bankers, including J. B. McDougal, governor of the federal reserve district in Chicago. McDougal has approved the soundness of the plan.

Heavy Buying in Wheat Pit Carries Markets Upward

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Bullish sentiment was rampant in wheat yesterday, and the belief that better things were in store for agriculture in general resulted in a wave of buying sweeping over the market which gained momentum as prices advanced.

Pit brokers said the volume of buying in the last hour of trading had only been exceeded in recent years by that witnessed during the heights of the tremendous bull markets several years ago.

Unconfirmed reports that the federal farm board had sold 1,000,000 or more cash wheat for export or to exporters in the last few days, some placing the figures as high as 4,500,000 bu, caused many of the local professionals who had taken profits on their lines recently to start to try and reinstate them, but ran into extremely keen competition from strong commission houses. A break of ¾c early resulted in the pit element getting short, and when the big buying orders started to come into the pit there was very little for sale.

Wheat Nears Season's High.

After almost two months of steady declining wheat prices, during which period new low record levels were made almost daily, the market has reversed its action and since Oct. 5 has advanced so rapidly as to seriously endanger the highest figures on the crop. The March and July sold at a new high for the season yesterday, while the May touched 53⅛c, or within ⅝c of the best figures so far, advances of 9⅞@10⅛c in the last 15 days being recorded.

There were numerous stories afloat last night as to what was back of the tremendous buying of wheat futures, none of which could be confirmed, but pit brokers said there was every indication that cash interests had been active on the buying side during the day, leading to a belief that the buying was done in connection with export sales. Closing trades were at the top with net gains of 1⅝@2¼c with December finishing at 54⅞ to 54½c, March 57½c, May 59 to 59¼c, and July 59⅛ to 59⅜c.

The cash wheat position is regarded by traders as rapidly gaining strength, and those who have predicted that $1 would be paid some time during the current crop year saw visions of their ideas being realized, as the top grade of choice No. 1 amber durum at Minneapolis yesterday was quoted at 89⅞c at the close. The seaboard reported the farm board had withdrawn all offers of durum wheat there.

Winnipeg Market Lags.

The Winnipeg wheat market was inclined to lag somewhat as compared with Chicago, although it gained 1¼@1⅝c with December quoted at 53⅝c in Canadian funds which were quoted about 10 per cent discount. The May delivery there sold up to 4⅜c, a new high for the season. Liverpool was unchanged to ½d higher, with December quoted at 57⅝c on the basis of $3.92 for sterling.

A decrease of 16.4 per cent in the winter wheat acreage in 11 states was suggested by reports to the Modern Miller, and the Nebraska mid-month crop report said that rains were needed over the greater part of that state. However, the trade is paying little attention to the outlook for the new crop at the present time, being too engrossed with the possibility of a tremendous export business developing for American hard winters. According to Tokio, Japan estimates the orient will need 50,000,000 bu wheat this season, but the figure of 34,000,000 bu given for China is regarded as low by the trade.

Corn in Strong Rally.

Corn was weak early, but reversed its action later in sympathy with wheat and closed ⅝@1¼c higher, December being 37⅛ to 37⅛c, May 41⅝ to 41⅞c, and July 43⅝c. Bulk of the trade was of a local character. The early decline was due in part to an easing in the cash basis with some of the new grain quoted as 1c lower as compared with the December. Around 29 cars of new corn were received here today out of a total of 150 cars of all kinds. The holding tendency on the part of the farmer continues to be reflected in a lack of country offerings to arrive. The May wheat-corn spread widened out to 17½c at the last, the widest so far.

Oats finished ¼@½c lower, with December closing at 23⅝c, May 25⅛ to 26c, and July 25⅛@25⅜c. The market was influenced largely by the action of other grains, although there was little export demand in evidence at the seaboard. Rye gained 1¼@1⅝c in sympathy with wheat, December closing at 41¼c and May at 45⅛c.

FRANCE EXTENDS LARGE CREDIT TO AUSTRIAN BANK

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

VIENNA, Oct. 23.—It has been officially announced that the Bank of France, at the request of the French government, has placed at the disposal of the Austrian National bank $8,500,000 in foreign paper to increase the cover on Austrian note issue. It is hoped a consequence will be to relax currency regulations which, owing to difficulty in procuring foreign exchange, are already causing a shortage of stocks and a rise in prices.

The Bank of England has already agreed to extend the period for repayment of the $14,000,000 balance of its advance of $21,000,000 to Austria until Jan. 16, while the Bank for International Settlements has renewed its rediscount credit of $103,000,000. It is hoped all this will restore confidence in the Austrian schilling.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 23.—Stocks affected a good display of strength in today's trading. It was a purely professional demonstration and, in keeping with the popular spirit of economy now prevailing, was put on at a minimum of expense to its promoters. Not much more than a million shares were turned over, all told.

The rail stocks once more set the pace. Word came during the course of the forenoon that a southern road had been able to effect a 10 per cent cut in the wages of its employés without precipitating a strike and some of the more optimistic ones of the trading fraternity guessed that the move might pave the way for a general agreement between the roads of the country and their employés whereby pay schedules could be reduced without costly trouble.

New York Central Active.

Refusal of the carrier executives to accept the pooling agreement offered by the interstate commerce commission unless the amounts turned over to the weaker lines are classified as loans instead of outright gifts was also counted as a factor in favor of the bull side of the argument here.

New York Central was one of the most active issues on the tape and at one time was up about three points over last night's figure, but late afternoon profit taking reduced its showing to some extent. Delaware and Hudson, Rock Island, New Haven, Union Pacific and others moved ahead 1 to 3 points or so.

Feature Alcohol Shares.

Alcohol shares were an unusual feature in the industrial section. United States Industrial Alcohol spurted 5 points and American Commercial ran up half as much. As there has been nothing in the recent news to indicate any sudden change for the better in the industry, the fraternity credited the display to pool operations.

Pivotal issues improved their standings by 1 to 2 points or so. United States Steel finished the day at 70⅝, up 2¼, and American Can at 47, up 3⅜. Consolidated Gas advanced about 2 points and General Electric 1⅝.

Some specialties rallied rather briskly. International Business Machine jumped nearly 10 points on a single transaction, and Ingersoll Rand advanced about 4 on a fairly moderate turnover. Auburn Auto, there as usual when anything is doing, moved ahead for more than 6 points.

Oil shares did a little better for no apparent reason and the metals registered further improvement on the outlook for copper curtailment. Standard Oil of California and Houston were in the van of operations in the petroleum section.

Foreign Short Covering.

Allied Chemical and Dye carried on after its bullish display yesterday with a further runup of 2 points. Foreign short covering has been playing a conspicuous part in the current strength of this issue, according to gossip around the exchange. The dope is that the stock had been heavily oversold both here and abroad and that some of the operators on the short side are getting an idea that they might have overdone it somewhat.

Evidence of a better feeling toward the motor shares continued to manifest itself in a quiet way. General Motors advanced a point and Chrysler a half. The annual show is coming on pretty soon and the trade is counting on it more than usual to stimulate sentiment in favor of their new wares. The third quarter report of General Motors made public during the day had little effect on operations. The figures showing dividends not quite covered were about in line with the street's expectations.

BANKERS CO. MAY BE DISCONTINUED, WALL ST. HEARS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 23.—The Bankers Company of New York, investment affiliate of the Bankers Trust Company of New York, will probably be discontinued and the investment business taken over by the trust company, it is understood.

The advantages of such a move, it was stated, have been under consideration for several months. Before the organization of the investment affiliate the securities business was handled by the bank itself. It is understood that the change will be made in order to effect smoother internal operation and greater economy. The investment business will be carried on by the same officers and personnel, it was reported.

CHRYSLER HAS LARGER PROFIT THAN YEAR AGO

New York, Oct. 23.—(AP)—A substantial improvement in third quarter earnings this year over the like period of 1930 was reported today by the Chrysler corporation. Consolidated net profit for the period this year was $1,518,966, equal to 34 cents a share, compared with a net loss of $916,103 in the corresponding quarter of 1930.

Net for the September quarter, however, fell behind the $3,321,962, or 75 cents a share, reported for the second quarter of this year. It was pointed out that third quarter earnings of automobile manufacturers usually show a substantial decline from the preceding period.

Net for the nine months this year totaled $3,771,002, or 85 cents a share, against $2,492,547, or 56 cents a share, in the like period of 1930.

Walter P. Chrysler, chairman, said the balance sheet of Sept. 30 showed the strongest cash position, and the highest ratio of current assets to current liabilities in the corporation's history. Total current assets as of Sept. 30 were $87,852,615, compared with $87,579,087 as of June 30, and cash and marketable securities as of Sept. 30 totaled $60,186,185, against $55,257,096 on June 30. The corporation declared the regular dividend of 25 cents.

In the first nine months of this year 243,251 vehicles were sold, compared with 241,159 vehicles in the corresponding nine months of 1930. Total sales were $162,410,520 as against $182,700,958 last year. The company increased its profit 51 per cent this year, although the dollar volume of sales was 11 per cent less than the same period last year.

Daily Average Crude Oil Production Increases

Daily average gross crude oil production in the United States increased 274,200 barrels in the week ended Oct. 17, totaling 2,437,900 barrels, the American Petroleum institute's weekly summary indicates. Daily average production east of California increased 272,400 barrels to 2,929,600 barrels. Refineries representating 95.2 per cent of estimated total capacity operated at 66.7 per cent of their capacity, compared with 64.5 per cent in the preceding week.

Detroit Edison Co.

Please give me your opinion on Detroit Edison stock as an investment at the present time.—M. M.

Detroit Edison company serves a population of 2,279,000 in Detroit and in numerous adjacent communities. The company showed steady growth through 1929, its peak year.

In 1930 sale of electricity to large users declined 17 per cent from 1929, largely a reflection of reduced activity in the automobile trade. Total gross was $53,706,926, against $56,558,279 for 1929.

Net income for 1930 was $11,118,667, or $8.75 per share, against $13,146,064, or $11.16 per share on a smaller number of shares for 1929.

Net income was $11,271,244, or $8.87 per share, against net of $11,886,370, or $9.61 per share on a smaller number of shares for the twelve months to Aug. 31, 1930.

Financing in the last ten years has been mostly by sale of capital stock through distribution of rights. On Dec. 31, 1930, capital stock [par $100] outstanding totaled $127,060,100 and funded debt was $118,133,900.

Recent bond refunding has reduced annual interest charges by $132,000. Interest on the company's bonds has been covered by wide margins and per share earnings have shown stability, although they are not immune to conditions in the automobile trade.

The capital stock has been on an annual $8 dividend basis since 1916. In addition valuable rights have been given.

Pennsylvania Gas and Electric.

Please tell me if Pennsylvania Gas & Electric company 6 per cent sinking fund bonds due Dec. 1, 1940, are good.—Mrs. J. L. H.

Pennsylvania Gas & Electric company, a subsidiary of Pennsylvania Gas & Electric corporation, supplies manufactured gas to the city of York, Pa., and through a subsidiary retails gas to the balance of York county. The company controls Peoples Light company of Pittston, Pa.

Gross revenues increased steadily from 1927 through 1930. Fixed charges of the holding company were earned 1.80 times in 1930, against 1.75 times in 1929.

For the twelve months to Aug. 31, 1931, consolidated net income before interest, depreciation and dividends was $626,070. Charges and preferred dividends of subsidiaries were $18,162 and bond interest was $271,491. For the preceding twelve months net before interest, depreciation and dividends was $622,246. Charges and preferred dividends of subsidiaries were $13,776 and bond interest was $260,074.

The debenture 6s due 1940 are the unsecured obligations of the company. They are somewhat speculative.

U. S., FOREIGN BONDS ADVANCE IN DULL TRADE

New York, Oct. 23.—(AP)—Strength in foreign and United States government obligations featured the bond market today as activity slumped to recent low levels. The upturn in treasury and Liberty loans was ascribed in some quarters to the end of liquidation by holders who had been in need of cash. Several issues advanced more than 1 point, and the treasury 3¼s of 1943-47 jumped 1¼ points, the largest gain of the group.

Many foreign issues closed from 1 to 3 points higher and a few of them scored greater advances. Among the bonds notable for their activity or strength were Belgian 7s of 1955 and of 1956, German Central Agricultural Bank Loans, German 5½s and 7s, Medellin 6½s, Japanese 5½s and 6½s, Paris Orleans 5½s, Saxon Public Works 6½s and 7s and United Steel Works series A 6½s.

Atchison general 4s featured the rail group by their heaviness and sold at another bottom level at 88¾. The New York Stock exchange announced counterfeit bonds of this issue have been discovered, but they are described as "very poorly executed copies," capable of easy detection.

Cleveland Reserve Bank Raises Rediscount Rate

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23.—(AP)—The federal reserve board announced today that the Federal Reserve bank of Cleveland had increased its rediscount rate from 3 to 3½ per cent. The increase was the second for the Cleveland bank within two weeks and placed it on a level with the rates in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Minneapolis, and San Francisco.

Richmond and Dallas have a 4 per cent rate, while Atlanta, which has not increased its rate recently, maintains a 3 per cent charge. The Minneapolis rate of 3½ per cent was established in September, 1930.

Container Corp. Reports Loss for Third Quarter

Container Corporation of America yesterday reported a net loss for the third quarter of $133,019 as compared with a net profit of $99,829 in the September quarter last year. For the first nine months this year the company had a net loss of $501,621 against a net profit of $416,012 in the comparable period of 1930. In issuing the statement President Walter P. Paepcke said: "Outlook for the fourth quarter is distinctly poor because we anticipate a smaller volume and a continuance of the unsatisfactory price levels."

LIFE INSURANCE SALES IN STATE LOWER IN SEPT.

Sales of life insurance in Illinois for September touched a new low for the year, the $46,314,000 worth of insurance written by the companies reporting being $5,964,000 under the August total and $7,565,000 below the life insurance sold in Illinois in September, 1930.

Total figures for the first nine months of the year, as reported by the research department of the Illinois chamber of commerce, were $527,534,000, as compared to $628,409,000 for the same period in 1930. The peak for the first nine months of the present year was reached in March, when $68,677,000 was sold.

Figures for each month of 1931 as reported by the state chamber are: January, $57,062,000; February, $59,201,000; March, $68,677,000; April, $67,327,000; May, $62,296,000; June, $60,262,000; July, $54,117,000; August, $52,278,000, and September, $46,314,000.

The number of Illinois companies reporting gains in September was 30 per cent of the total. The percentage decline in Illinois life insurance sales in September, compared with the same month last year, was 14 per cent, compared to 11 per cent for the United States as a whole.

GENERAL MOTORS HAS $13,333,214 3D QUARTER NET

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 23.—The income report of General Motors corporation for the third quarter, issued today by Alfred P. Sloan Jr., disclosed net earnings of $13,333,214, equal after deduction of $2,344,152 for preferred dividends to 25 cents a share on the common stock outstanding.

Actual figures were in line with what Wall street had expected of the country's leading automobile organization for the September period, falling short of dividend requirements by 50 cents. The company is scheduled to act on its common and preferred dividends early next month and it is believed that the regular quarterly rate of 75 cents a share on the common will be declared.

Third quarter results compare with earnings of $25,470,697 for corresponding period of last year. Equal after preferred dividends to $2.63 a share on the junior stock. However, these figures do not include a non-operating, nonrecurring profit of $9,517,943 realized in the second quarter from the sale to General Motors Management corporation of 1,275,000 shares of General Motors common. Including this item total earnings for the first nine months were equal to $2.85 a share.

Improves Position.

Further improvement was shown in the company's financial position as of Sept. 30. Cash, United States government and other marketable securities amounted to $364,107,166 compared with $179,037,071 at the close of last year and $282,064,960 as of Sept. 30, 1930.

Net working capital amounted to $218,526,557 compared with $281,037,636 at the end of 1930 and $285,777,740 on Sept. 30 of that year.

For the nine months ended Sept. 30, General Motors dealers in the United States delivered to consumers 800,584 cars, compared with 900,207 cars in the corresponding period of 1930. Sales by General Motors' operating divisions to dealers in the United States amounted to 814,959 cars, compared with 896,329 cars in the first nine months of 1930. Total sales to dealers, including Canadian sales and overseas shipments amounted to 939,846 cars, compared with 1,008,597 cars in the corresponding period of 1930.
